ARRESTED AS GIRL'S SLAYER

WAR SPIRIT FLARES OVER ALL EUROPE; CLASH NEAR

Montenegrin Army Leaves Scutari to Repulse Threatened Invasion by Austria to Oust Little Kingdom From Spoils Won.

King Nicholas' Fight Against the Domination of Franz Josef Aligns Powers and Strains Relations to the Breaking Point.

How Nations Near Clash Compare

Montenegro is Europe's littlest kingdom, having a maximum fighting strength of 50,000 and a population of 225,000.

Austria-Hungary has a population of 51,340,378 and a standing army of 1,095,000.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, April 28.—Advices received here to-day by way of Vienna state that Crown Prince Danilo and most of the Montenegrin troops in Scutari left that city to-day and are marching northward. The Montenegrins left only five batteries of guns in Scutari, it is reported. The dispatch indicated that the Montenegrin army is marching toward Antivari, the port of Cettinje, where the Austrians threatened to land a force.

Threatened with invasion by Austria, supported by the powers, Montenegro still refuses to yield. M. Popvitch, Montenegrin Plenipotentiary to London, to-day handed in the reply of his country to representatives of the English and the Continental powers that Scutari be given up.

This reply, which was formally tendered to the Ambassadors at the Foreign Office, protests against coercion and requests that the powers again examine the question before presenting an ultimatum.

"Montenegro, despite its size, desires to be placed on an equal footing with the other members of the Balkan League," says the communication. "We request the same consideration and demand the same justice given to the stronger States."

Europe Watches Austria, Firebrand of New Crisis.

VIENNA, April 28.—Threatened with the gravest possibility of war, or at least by political disruption, Europe's attention to-day was centered on Austria, the firebrand power in whose grasp is the torch which might set the conflagration. Archduke Francis Ferdinand, heir to the Austrian throne, held a long conference with Emperor Francis Joseph, following a special meeting of the cabinet.

Afterward it was announced that unless the ambassadorial high court sitting in London acts at once "Austria will take independent steps to enforce the decision of the powers that Montenegro must not possess Scutari."

Invasion Is Reported.

While this announcement was being made Austria was busily engaged in war preparations. There was great activity at the Trieste naval depot, it being reported from there that an Austrian naval division with 10,000 troops had left there for Antivari, the port of Cettinje, capital of Montenegro.

A report was circulated on the bourse that part of the Austrian army massed in Bosnia and Herzegovina had already invaded Montenegrin soil, but this report was denied by General Krobatin, Austrian minister of war.

There was extreme activity at the war office. General Von Holzendorf is in charge of the preparations. Nearly all the troops being sent into southern Hungary are Austrians, while Slav regulars are being moved to the northern frontiers of Austria.

Fobs to Trolley Men Urge 'Safety First'

1,000 Street Car Employees Become Members of Atlanta Public Safety League.

"Safety First, Safety Always" is the inscription on 1,000 bronze watch fobs presented to-day to street car motormen and conductors by the Georgia Railway and Power Company.

The fobs were made from a special design, in the form of medallions. They are intended as tokens of membership in the Atlanta Public Safety League and to remind them that the first duty of a motorman or conductor is to promote public safety.

Both Fire and Graft Probes Start Tuesday

Woodward Has Old Witnesses Summoned in Attempt to Obtain New Evidence.

Subpoenas for the following witnesses, to be heard when the fire probe is reopened to-morrow morning, were served to-day:

R. E. Davidson, W. R. Joyner, Jr., Thomas Reynolds, J. J. Rafter, P. O. Hebert, H. S. Courtney, W. B. Cody and B. G. Carlton. They have all been on the stand before, but Mayor Woodward expects to secure important new evidence this time.

Charles T. Hopkins, attorney for Alderman John E. McClelland, the accuser of Aldermen Spratling, Maddox and Ragsdale, has returned to Atlanta. The councilmanic graft probe will proceed in earnest to-morrow afternoon.

CITY A-FLUTTER OVER PONY AND THEATER OFFER

First Coupons Will Appear in The Georgian Thursday—Others Through Week.

FINE BILL AT THE ATLANTA

Boys and Girls Plan to Get Shetlands To Be Given Away Without Cost.

Atlantans are "all interest" over the free ponies and free theater seats to be given readers of The Georgian and The Sunday American.

Of course, when the plan was announced we expected there would be a flutter. But there has been more than flutter—there is a regular gale of excitement. Everyone on the street cars is talking about the generous offer—you've heard them.

If you want to see a splendid play free of all cost, don't fail to secure the necessary four coupons. The first will appear in The Georgian Thursday. The coupons will follow Friday, Saturday and Sunday. Send these four coupons by mail with a self-addressed and stamped envelope, and we will mail you a theater ticket, one of the best in Atlanta's best theater.

There's no trick to it, no contest, no expense. It's absolutely free.

Something Worth While Offered.

The Georgian feels that in giving seats to the Atlanta Theater it is offering something worth while to every theatergoer

The Atlanta Theater never presents any but first-class attractions, and the Billy Long stock company is no exception to its invariable rule.

Miss Billy Long, say those who already have seen her play "Wildfire," which Lillian Russell made famous, say she is more than a good actress; that she is one of the best. Lillian Russell herself could give no more satisfactory portrayal of the leading role, and Miss Long is ably supported.

Good Company Playing.

The Atlanta Theater is anxious that the Atlanta public shall not confound this stock company with the ordinary summer repertoire aggregation. This is an infinitely superior organization. The Atlanta Theater feels that when the [illegible] readers of The Georgian and Sunday American have passed their discriminating verdict on the performances, and the merits of Miss Billy Long and her supporting players thus are advertised, all Atlanta will flock to the theater through the summer, insuring the success of the undertaking. That is why the Atlanta Theater is co-operating so heartily with The Georgian in the distribution of free seats.

But the boys and girls are more interested in the free ponies and carts.

Following the announcement in The Sunday American that such pretty and valuable prizes were to be awarded to dozens of children in Atlanta, a perfect flood of nominations poured into our offices. Already enough children have indicated their willingness to compete for the ponies and carts that it is plain the contests will be spirited.

Particulars on Another Page.

But this doesn't mean that you haven't an even chance. The contest is not yet started. Full particulars appear on another page of this issue.

And watch for the intelligent little Shetland ponies, which are on the way to their new homes. We will take pains to show them. Look them over and pick out the one you want for your very own. Then set to work to win it. You'll find it pleasant, exciting and profitable.

FORMER PUPIL GIVES A HAT TO MRS. CLARK

WASHINGTON, April 28.—Mrs. Champ Clark, wife of the Speaker, has received a gorgeous black hat, trimmed with a wonderful white ostrich plume, from Miss Jeanette Deppe, of St. Louis, as a token of love and affection for her teacher of the little Missouri schoolhouse.

"Yes, I used to be a school teacher," said Mrs. Clark, "and they should be the highest paid officials in the land, for their work is the most important of all."

JOHN M. GANT ACCUSED OF THE CRIME; FORMER BOOKKEEPER TAKEN BY POLICE

J. M. GANT, arrested in Marietta for the murder of Mary Phagan, gave to a reporter for The Georgian his story of his actions that led to his arrest. He protested his innocence, and declared he was home in bed at the time the crime is supposed to have been committed.

In striking contradiction to this statement is the assertion of Mrs. F. C. Terrell, of 284 East Linden Street, where Gant said he slept Saturday night, that she had not seen Gant in three weeks.

"I watched the Memorial Day parade in Atlanta," said Gant, as he sat in the Marietta police station, "and after the parade was mostly over I went out to the ball game. After the game I remembered that I had left some old shoes at the pencil factory, and decided to go over and get them. I went over there at 6 o'clock and Superintendent Frank let me in.

"He told the negro watchman to help me find my shoes, and both of them saw me get them and also saw me leave the building.

"Then I went back to town and met Arthur White, who is employed in the pencil factory, O. G. Bagley, an employee of the Atlanta Milling Company, and Bagley's brother. With them I played pool in the Globe pool parlor on Broad Street until 10:30 o'clock, and then I caught a car and went home.

"Yes, I knew the girl. I knew Mary Phagan quite well, but I swear to you I had not seen her since I left the plant as an employee three weeks ago. I am innocent and developments will prove it."

Gant answers the description of the man Edgar L. Sentell says he saw with the Phagan girl shortly after midnight to a remarkable degree. He is about six feet tall, of slender build and dark complexion. His hair is dark and inclined to curl, and he wore a blue suit and a straw hat. He said that he is twenty-four years old and that his name was James, and not John, as Superintendent Frank had stated.

Gant was arrested by Deputy Sheriff Hicks on the 1 o'clock car. He did not appear particularly nervous and was confident that he would be able to demonstrate his innocence, but the detectives with him were equally certain that the slayer had been captured.

Here is told in chronological order the story of the mystery:

1—Mary Phagan, 14 years old, was strangled to death in the National Pencil Co.'s factory, 37 South Forsyth Street.

2—Newt Lee, negro night watchman, found her body in the basement a little after 3 o'clock Sunday morning and notifies the police. He was arrested.

3—Arthur Mullinax, identified by E. S. Sentell, 82 Davis Street, as the man who was with Mary Phagan at 12:30 o'clock Sunday morning, was arrested Sunday afternoon and is held in solitary confinement at police headquarters.

4—Leo M. Frank, superintendent of the National Pencil Co.'s factory, was summoned to police headquarters this morning and detained there to tell what he knows of the girl and of her terrible fate.

5—Hair, tangled and matted, but identified positively as the dead girl's, was found clinging to a lathe on the third floor of the factory, which leads the police to believe that someone who had access to the factory is responsible for the crime.

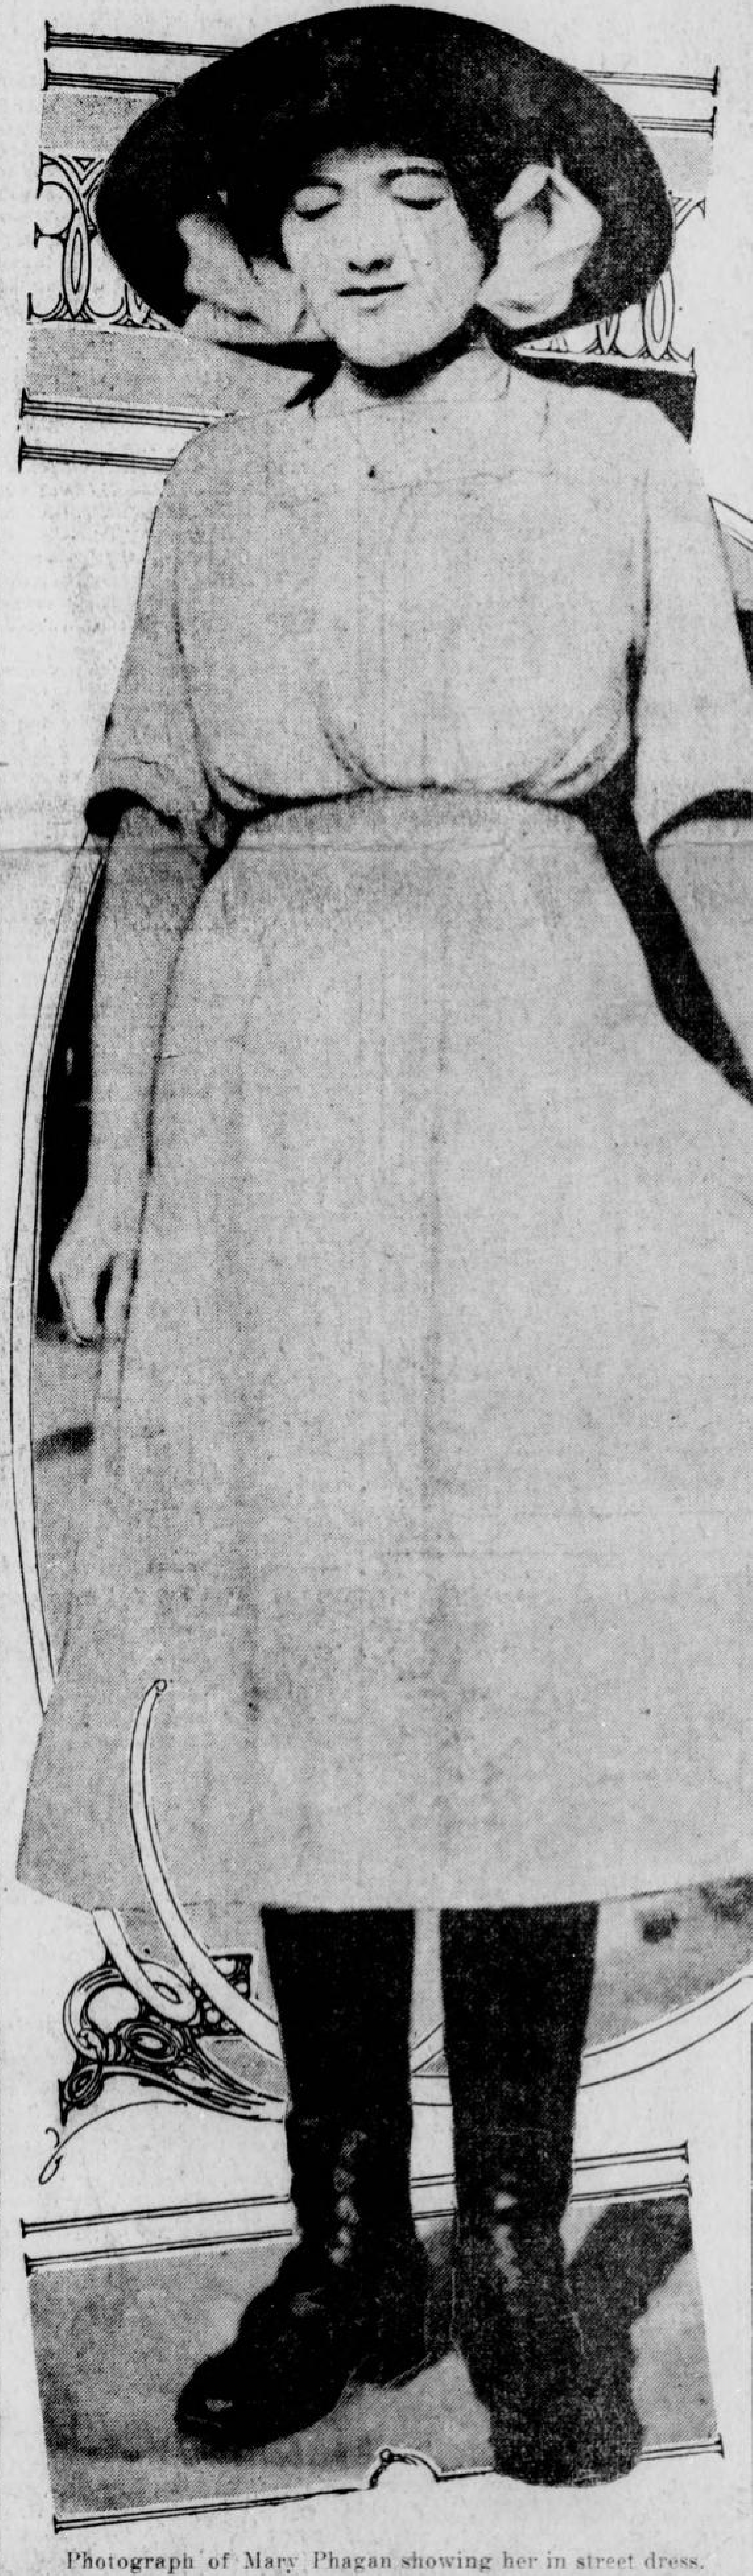

6—Geron Bailey, the negro elevator boy employed in the factory, was also arrested.

7—E. S. Skipper, 224½ Peters Street, says he saw a girl answering the description of Mary Phagan being forced to accompany three flashily dressed youths, who took her to Whitehall, near Mitchell Street, at about 10 o'clock Saturday night. The girl was weeping and seemed weak and dazed.

8—When the girls employed at the National Pencil Co.'s factory assembled for work this morning they were so upset and excited from reading of the murder of Mary Phagan that the factory had to be closed.

9—J. M. Gant, former bookkeeper in the pencil factory, arrested in Marietta and accused of the murder.

10—Gant tells The Georgian he was home and in bed at 28[illegible] East Linden Avenue when the crime occurred. His landlady says he has not been there in three weeks.

Slain Girl Modest And Quiet, He Says

Timekeeper at Pencil Factory Declares Mary Phagan Attended Strictly to Her Work.

"She was a quiet and modest little girl," was the tribute paid Mary Phagan to-day by E. F. Holloway, a timekeeper at the National Pencil Company's plant.

"I never noticed her talking with any of the employees. She was invariably polite, as though she had been carefully reared in her home. She paid attention strictly to her own work and never was seen conversing with any of the men, so far as I know.

"In fact, I don't know that she even had any acquaintances with any of the men except in cases where it was necessary as a part of her work. The only man she ever was friendly with is not here now. He was discharged three weeks ago."

Gant Was Infatuated With Girl; at Factory Saturday

Gant was arrested on a warrant sworn out in Judge Powers' court, charging him with murder.

Gant was last seen before his arrest at 8:45 this morning by Herbert Schiff, assistant superintendent of the factory. A few minutes later he was on a car bound for Marietta.

The officers in Marietta were notified by telephone and were on the watch for a man answering Gant's description.

The detectives began to spread their nets for Gant on significant stories coming from half a dozen different sources.

All were to the effect that Gant had tried on many occasions to pay attentions to the little girl, and that his infatuation for her was evident even in the factory.

Gant was employed as shipping clerk for some time with the pencil company, but left three weeks [illegible] Saturday. the way and hurry down Forsyth Street toward Alabama Street. He was dressed in a blue suit and wore a straw hat. He carried a package under his arm.

Detective Starnes was notified, but by the time he had taken up the trail, Gant had disappeared. Officers were dispatched to the railway stations and to the Marietta Street cars to thwart him if he had any thoughts of escaping.

E. F. Holloway, timekeeper at the factory, said that he was aware of Gant's infatuation for the girl, but did not know that she accepted his attentions at all.

Gant had told him, he said, that he had been greatly attracted by Mary Phagan and had walked home with her and had been with her on other occasions.

Mary Pirk, a girl who worked near Mary Phagan in the pencil factory, said to-day that she knew the murdered girl well and that she had heard her girl companions talking a number of times of Gant's infatuation for the Phagan girl.

She had heard, she said, that Gant frequently walked home with her and paid her other attentions.

Police detectives, after an all-forenoon conference with Leo Frank, permitted the factory superintendent to go. One result of the conference, however, was to get an important admission from Newt Lee, the negro night watchman, who is being held as a material witness.

Gant Admitted to Factory Saturday.

Mr. Frank told the detectives that after leaving the factory Saturday evening he called up Lee and asked him if Gant, who had asked permission of Frank a few minutes before to get his shoes in an upstairs room had left the building yet. The negro answered that Gant had obtained his shoes and left the building within ten minutes.

This noon, however, Attorneys Luther Rosser and Herbert Haas, who were representing Superintendent Frank, went to Lee's cell after the conference in the detectives' office had concluded and questioned him sharply in regard to Gant.

After catching him in a misstatement, they induced him to admit that his first testimony in regard to the time Gant was in the building was misleading. He thought that Gant was there 20 minutes or half an hour.

He added the remark, which is regarded as highly important, that Gant, while in the building, called up and talked to some girl.

Recent Movements a Mystery.

The case against Gant is made stronger by the mystery surrounding his movements during the past three weeks. Mrs. F. C. Terrell, of 284 East Linden Avenue, with whom Gant has been boarding, told a Georgian reporter this morning that three weeks ago to-day Gant packed up all his belongings and left her house, telling her he had secured a good position in California and was going there at once.

Gant's object in telling the California trip story to Mrs. Terrell is unknown, but detectives consider his movements during the three weeks that have elapsed since then a strong link in the chain of evidence that is being woven about him.

Mrs. Terrell said she had not received any word from Gant, and supposed he was in California. She considered his silence unusual, because hitherto whenever Gant had been away from home, for even a day or two, he had always sent postcards or a letter.

Mrs. Terrell also declared that Gant had known the Phagan family in Marietta, where Mary Phagan lived for a number of years. Gant has been living with the Terrell family for seven years. Up to four or five years ago the Terrells were neighbors of the Phagans in Marietta, and little Mary often played around the Terrell home. It was there that Gant became acquainted with her, Mrs. Terrell said. Gant is about 22 years old.

Strange Notes Increase Mystery.

A few inches from the body were found two remarkably strange notes. These notes, incoherent and almost illegible, only serve to increase the mystery. Detectives declared there was no doubt that these notes were written by the murderer and were a feeble and tragically grotesque effort at a ruse. They purport to have been written by the girl, and the wording would seem to indicate that she had written them after she was in the throes of death.

"A tall, black negro did this," is the substance of the two notes.

The police were notified by the janitor, and several officers were quickly on the scene, immediately starting a thorough investigation.

After finding that all of the doors and windows to the building were securely fastened, the police took Newt Lee into custody on suspicion, believing that he could throw light on the tragedy. Lee carried the keys to the building, but protested that he had admitted no one to the building, and that he had no idea that any one had been inside until he found the body.

Detectives are certain that the negro can explain the mystery of how the girl found her way into the building, even if he did not actually commit the murder.

Negro Pleads Total Ignorance.

The negro's sole statement to detectives since his arrest has been:

"I didn't know nothing about it until I found the body."

Detectives, however, declare the locked doors and windows render this statement unreasonable.

The negro was put through a grilling examination time and again Sunday and last night, but no amount of questioning could induce him to change his "know nothing" statement. To every question he replied:

"I don't know nothing about it."

Detectives are sure the negro has not told all he knows, and will hold him until the mystery is cleared.

The theory that the crime was the work of a negro held full sway and was assiduously followed by detectives until Sunday afternoon, when E. L. Sentell, of 82 Davis Street, a clerk for the Kamper Grocery Company, divulged the information that he saw Mary Phagan at Forsyth and Hunter Streets Sunday morning, about 12:30 o'clock, in company with Arthur Mullinax. He said they were walking in the direction of the pencil factory, which is but a few doors from this corner. Sentell knew the Phagan girl, and said he spoke to her as he passed.

Since then detectives have been working on both theories—that the crime was committed by a negro and that it was the job of a white man and that the negro watchman is an accomplice in that he knew of it.

This gave a new angle to the mystery and set detectives on the trail of Mullinax, who was found late in the afternoon and placed under arrest on suspicion.

Gant was arrested as he alighted from a street-car from Atlanta, carrying a suitcase. He was taken by Deputy Sheriff Hicks, to the office of Sheriff Swanson, where he was questioned and the contents of the suitcase examined.

Chief of Police Goodson, of Marietta, said this afternoon that Gant expressed surprise when arrested, but didn't make a statement. Gant, it was stated, was extremely nervous when he got off the car, and was evidently expecting something to happen. When Hicks accosted him and placed him under arrest, Gant turned pale and stammered that there must be some mistake.

Gant in Saloon.

Charles W. McGee, of Colonial Hills, a bartender in the saloon of J. P. Hunter, at 38 South Forsyth Street, across the street from the plant of the National Lead Pencil Company, this afternoon said that Gant and another man, whom he did not know, came in his place Saturday night about 10 o'clock.

"Gant and the other man," said McGee, "walked back to the lunch counter and got something to eat, and then Gant came to the bar and said he wanted to leave a pair of shoes with us until Monday morning. I told him he could, and the shoes were placed behind the cigar counter in the front part of the saloon."

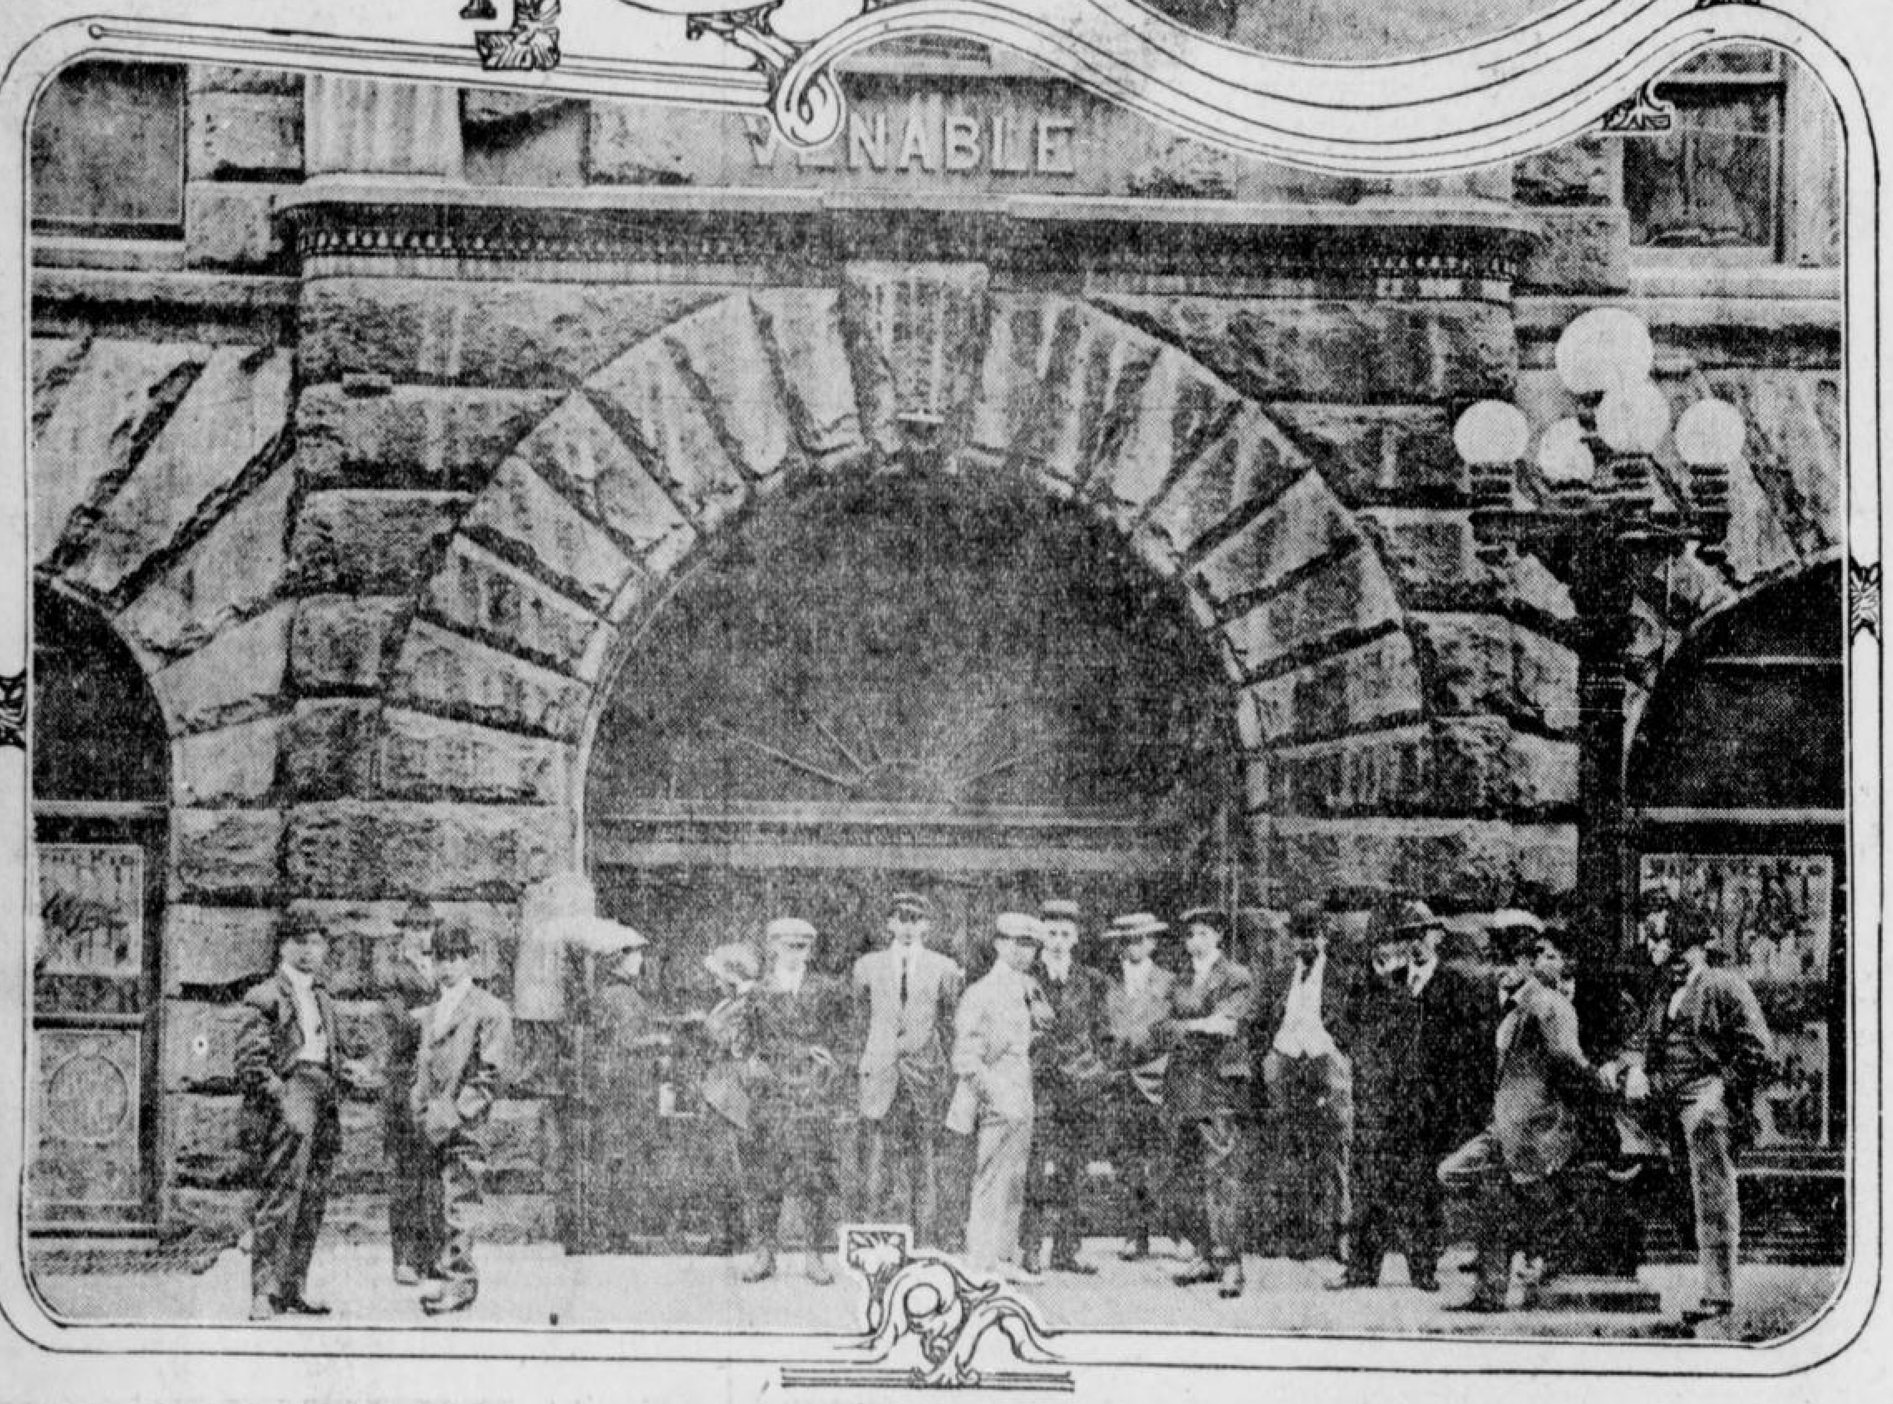

While in Hunter's place Gant and the other man appeared to be in a hurry and kept talking earnestly together as though they were planning something.

This morning at 8 o'clock Gant, looking like he had not had much sleep, came into the Hunter saloon and got his shoes. He talked to McGee for a moment at the cigar counter, and they discussed the Phagan murder. McGee jokingly said the police were looking for Gant, and the latter was excited. He stepped quickly to the door and glanced across at the National Pencil Company's building, and then looked hastily up and down Forsyth Street. He then told McGee he was going to Marietta and walked rapidly up Forsyth Street.

SLAIN GIRL'S AUNT AND SISTER

At the right is Miss Ruth Phagan, aunt of Mary Phagan, and in her arms is Miss Ollie Phagan, sister of the victim, whom she is trying to comfort. Below, the old Granite Hotel building at 37-39 South Forsyth Street, now the home of the National Pencil Company, and scene of the slaying.

3 YOUTHS SEEN LEADING ALONG A REELING GIRL

E. S. Skipper Tells Police He Saw Lads Urging Her Down Street Night of Crime.

The story of three men leading a weeping, unwilling girl on Forsyth Street Saturday night is being sounded to its depths to-day by Atlanta policemen in their efforts to unravel the mystery of Mary Phagan's death.

The story is told by E. S. Skipper, of 224 1-2 Peters Street. He declared that on Saturday night about 10 o'clock he saw a girl whose appearance fitted the description of the girl-victim. Three men were with her, all of them young and flashily dressed.

The girl was reeling slightly, Skipper declares, as if rendered dizzy by drugs. She was crying, and time and again lagged behind her companions, as if she feared to go farther. Each time they insisted and she seemed powerless to resist them.

Skipper declared that he can identify the three men. He followed in their wake when first he saw the party on Pryor Street, near Trinity Avenue. At Trinity they turned toward Whitehall, he said, the men urging the girl to accompany them. Down Whitehall to Forsyth he accompanied them, and saw them turn north toward Mitchell Street. There he left them, going toward the Terminal Station, his original destination.

Skipper said that the girl did not appear intoxicated, but merely sick and pitifully weak.

Following closely on the heels of his story came to the police to-day the statement of Adam Woodward, night watchman in the Williams Livery Stable, 35 Forsyth Street, three doors from the factory building. He told the detectives that about 11 o'clock he heard a woman scream several times, but, considering it the cry of a merrymaker, paid no attention to it.

The time specified in the statement of the night watchman links closely with that of the occurrences in Skipper's story and, according to policemen, lends color to the theory that the three men he saw were the men who lured little Mary Phagan to her death.

Noted Dixie Athlete On Trial For Arson

Finger Prints Lead to Charge That Richard Webb Burned Professor's Office.

LEXINGTON, KY., April 28.—Richard S. Webb, former assistant football coach at the State University and known throughout the West and South as an athlete, was to-day placed on trial here charged with burning the office of P. L. Anderson, dean of engineering at the university. Another indictment charges burning a public building.

The case grows out of a college feud, in which practically the entire student body took sides.

The chief witness for the prosecution is Ray Campbell, a fingerprint expert from the Indiana Reformatory, who swore fingerprints on a clock in Anderson's office were made by Webb.

23 ESCAPE SINKING BOAT.

BATON ROUGE, LA., April 28.—Thirty-one sailors swam to safety when a Standard Oil steamer sank here after ramming a boat at the docks. Twenty-six thousand barrels of oil were lost.

FATHER AND SON SLAIN IN MISSISSIPPI WOODS

LAMBERT, MISS., April 28.—Missing since Friday, W. A. Rieves, aged 43, and his son, James, aged 16, of Chancey, Miss., were found dead in the woods to-day. The father had been shot in the back of the head; the son in the breast. A negro, discharged recently by Rieves, is suspected.

:-: Who Is This Man? :-:

Edgar L. Sentell, lifelong friend of Mary Phagan, says he saw a man answering this description, walking with the girl after midnight Sunday, a few hours before the body was found. He has identified the man as Arthur Mullniax, who, however, was to-day apparently cleared by an alibi established by his sweetheart.

Body Dragged by Deadly Cord After Terrific Fight

Stretched full length, face downward on the floor of basement at the reare of the plant, the body was found. A length of heavy cord or wrapping twine, which had been used by the slayer to strangle the child after he had beaten her to insensibility, was looped around the neck, and a clumsy bandage of cloth, torn from her petticoat, as if to conceal the horrible method of murder swathed the face.

The stray end of the cord lay along the child's back between her two heavy braids of dark red hair as if it had been arranged that way deliberately.

No marks appeared to indicate that death came by any other means than stragulation, save a four-inch clean cut on the back of the head on the left side,—a serious scalp wound—and a few bruises on the forehead and cheeks, on the left arm at the elbow and on the left leg just below the knee.

Body Dragged.

The neck was cut and bruised horribly by the contraction of the heavy strangling cord and the marks on the face indicated that the slayer had dragged the body back and forth across the basement floor to complete his work of garroting.

The child evidently had struggled and fought frantically before perhaps brought to unconsciousness by the blow on the head.

On her left arm was a small gold band bracelet that had sunk in to the white tender flesh as if under the pressure of a heavy grip. Two of the fingers on the left hand were bruised where a small signet ring encircled the third slender finger.

The child's face was covered with dirt and sand when the detectives reached the basement after being notified by Newt Lee, the negro watchman, who called police headquarters when, as he asserts, he stumbled over the little body as he made his rounds. The fine black particles were ground into the neck and shoulders, indicating her body was bumped along the floor dangling and twisting at the end of the garroting cord.

Features Marred.

She was garbed in a one-piece pongee silk dress of lavender, simply made, and caught at the bodice and trimmed at the sleeves with cheap lace. The dress fell barely below the knees. The stockings were black and a black gun metal pump was on the right foot. The other pump was found a few feet away on a pile of trash. A plain blue straw hat, with the band or trimming missing, was found near the elevator shaft.

Two turquoise-blue silken ribbon bows were fastened on each side of the wavy red braid of hair. Strangely enough the bows had been kept in place by the improvised bandage torn from the underskirt by the slayer. The bow, said to have been on the hat, was never found.

The horrid manner of her death marred frightfully the girl's once attractive features.

What had been a soft white skin,—white almost to translucence under which the color might have run in life in pink swirls—was discolored and bruised.

The force of the blow on the head had blackened the right eye and swollen both lids beyond recognition. Into the forehead cuts and scratches was grounded dirt and sand.

The marks on the left arm and leg were skin bruises as if made when the body was dragged across the floor. The skin had been scrapped off in little patches from spots about two to three inches in diameter.

Mary Phagan was 14 years old. She was slender in stature. She was perhaps 4 feet, 10 inches in height and weighed about 105 pounds.

DARDEN TELLS ON STAND WHY HE SLEW RIVAL

Pleads Unwritten Law, and Declares He Thought Encounter Was Duel to Death.

Elmer T. Darden, who, pleading the unwritten law, was put on trial for his life criminal division of Superior Court to-day for the slaying of C. M. Goddard, a Stone Mountain granite cutter, in the Union station March 13, took the stand in his own defense this afternoon and made a statement of the shooting and its causes.

With the testimony of a dozen eyewitnesses to the shooting, the State closed its case at 12:30 o'clock and court recessed until 2 o'clock.

The testimony given for the State followed the reports of the tragedy already published. Every attempt made by Paul Lindsay, attorney for the Goddard family, employed to aid Solicitor Dorsey in the prosecution, to send up any of Darden's children to testify against their father failed.

Wife of Slayer Absent.

Mrs. Darden, who had sworn that she would be at the trial to clear her name of any stigma, did not appear.

The State put on Mrs. J. R. Harwell, in charge of the work of the Travelers' Aid Society at the Union station; Addie Mays, a negro attendant; John Beaseley, a negro porter, and Policeman Hardy, all eyewitnesses.

Darden's statement follows:

Tells of Losing Money.

"I was born in Elizabeth City, Va., March 22, 1868, and married in June, 1894. About ten years ago my father left me $35,000. I then was in the granite business in Vermont.

"I bought a farm and little quarry near Redan, Ga., about eight years ago. Among my first acquaintances were the Goddards, and Cossie Goddard especially. He was closer to me than my brother, and when I was on the road, which was frequent, I had so much confidence in him I asked him to watch over my family.

"Finally I got extremely hard up for cash. My wife was a woman of high ideals and extravagance, and I guess I am largely to blame, for I had been her tutor in this particular. When I was no longer able to bestow on her luxuries, she became dissatisfied and quarrelsome. I begged her to be patient, telling her that I realized that we were almost down and out, but that my health was good, I was a man of education and could overcome the obstacles.

"On February 12 my wife came to Atlanta and spent the day and returned on the 6 o'clock accommodation train. She told me that she had been to the picture shows.

Asserts Her Love Waned.

"She made other visits to Atlanta the following week and once visited the place where I worked and made an engagement to go to lunch with me. She did not fill the engagement. She told me again she had been to the picture shows.

"I COULD TRUST MARY ANYWHERE," HER WEEPING MOTHER SAYS

ARTHUR MULLINAX

This youth, formerly a street car conductor, is held in connection with the investigation of the slaying of Mary Phagan in the basement of the National Pencil Factory in South Forsyth Street. He stoutly denies any connection with the crime, and declares his arrest is a "horrible mistake." He has accounted for himself, and likely will be released.

MRS. COLEMAN PROSTRATED BY CHILD'S DEATH

"No Working Girl Is Safe," She Sobs, Overcome by Her Sudden Sorrow.

Lying on the bed in her little home on Lindsay Street, prostrated with sorrow over the murder of her 14-year-old daughter, Mary Phagan, Mrs. W. J. Coleman sobbed out the pitiful story of how sweet and fresh her child had left home Saturday, and issued a warning to all Atlanta mothers to guard the welfare of their own daughters forced to work for a living.

"There are so many unscrupulous men in the world," she cried. "It's so dangerous for young girls working out. Their every step should be watched. Mothers should question them and ask them about their work and associates and surroundings. They should continually tell them what they ought to do, and how they ought to act under certain circumstances."

Girl Liked Work.

She declared that she never would have permitted Mary to go out to work at the age she did—12 years—if it hadn't been that there were five children in the family and it was absolutely necessary for all of them to earn something toward their support. That was before she married her present husband, Mr. Coleman.

"That was a year ago," said Mrs. Coleman, "and then it wouldn't have been necessary for Mary to work. But she had got into the habit of it and liked it, and I thought she could take care of herself as she always had."

"Oh, the poor baby!" she sobbed. "I did talk to her! I did tell her what to do! I was always telling her! And she took my advice, I know, because she was always so sensible about everything. Besides, she never was a child to flirt or act silly. That's why I know that when she went away with this man who killed her she was either overpowered or he threatened her."

Mrs. Coleman said that girls ought to look out for themselves, too, and never permit any familiarity from men.

"When a girl is pretty," she declared, "naturally she is attractive to men. Mary was pretty, too; and, besides that, she was always happy and in a good humor. She had never stayed out any night before in the two years she had been at work. I could trust her anywhere I knew because she was always so straightforward, and what I thought when she didn't come home was that she had met up with her aunt from Marietta, who was in town, and had gone home with her and had no way to let me know."

Too Young to Know.

She covered her face with her hands.

"And to think that at the time I was thinking that she was in the hands of a merciless brute! Oh, if only Mr. Coleman had happened along the street and found her! They tell me she was crying on a corner at 12 o'clock and this man she was with was cursing her when a policeman came up and asked her what was the matter. She just told him she had got dust in her eye. I guess the reason she didn't say anything was because she was afraid the man would kill her, and, in fact, just didn't know what to do. She was too young."

But with everything, Mrs. Coleman said, it wasn't possible for a mother to be with a child all the time or to stave off all harm that could come to her with advice.

"Even with the greatest care, it looks like things will happen anyway—we don't know how or why," she declared, weeping. "Oh, it's terrible to think of a young girl coming to her death like that! And she had already started home when this man met her and made her come back to town with him!"

So Young and Bright.

"Often I watched Mary on the car when men would look at her," Mrs. Coleman said, "but she never paid any attention to them. I think she must have made the man who killed her mad, and that's why he did it."

She said that when Mary left the house Saturday she had only intended to go to the pencil factory to draw the little salary that was coming to her—$1.60.

"If you could only have seen her," she told the reporter. "She looked so beautiful and so young and so bright! She said she was only going to see the parade before she came home. And look now! I am so sorry for all other young girls working everywhere! To think that they're all open to the same things, and there is nothing to protect them; it's so hard on mothers; it's so hard on everybody. But there doesn't seem to be any help for it, and that's the worst part of it all."

GIRL SLAIN IN STRANGLING MYSTERY

Mary Phagan, 14-year-old daughter of Mrs. J. W. Coleman, 146 Lindsay Street, whose slain body was found in the basement of the National Pencil Factory, 37-39 South Forsyth Street. The girl left her home Saturday morning to go to the factory, where she had been employed, to draw wages due her. She was seen on the streets at midnight Saturday with a strange man. She was not seen alive thereafter.

HORRIBLE MISTAKE, PLEADS MULLINAX, DENYING CRIME

Arthur Mullinax, identified as the man who was with Mary Phagan at midnight Saturday, a few short hours before her dead body was found, and now a prisoner in solitary confinement at police headquarters, declared to a Georgian reporter that his arrest was a terrible mistake.

He declared that he had never seen the girl except as "the sleeping beauty" in a church entertainment in which both took part last Christmas. Here is his complete story:

"I had absolutely no connection with this affair and have been wrongfully accused. Sentell is horribly mistaken when he says he saw me in company with Mary Phagan shortly after midnight Sunday morning in Forsyth Street. I did not even know the girl—that is, never had been introduced to her—and had never been anywhere with her in my life.

Sleeping Beauty."

"I had seen her one time. That was last Christmas at an entertainment given in the Western Heights Baptist Church. We both took part in that entertainment. She played the part of 'the sleeping beauty,' and I did a black face act and also sang in a quartet.

"But I was not even introduced to the girl. During the entertainment the girl remarked to me that I was a good black face artist, but this was all that passed between us. I have never been with her at any time since then, much less at midnight.

"As to my movements Saturday night, I can easily explain them. After supper, I called on a girl friend, Miss Pearl Robinson, who lives in Bellwood Avenue, and we came down town on the English Avenue car. We got off of the car at Marietta and Forsyth Streets and walked directly across to the Bijou Theater. We saw part of the first show and part of the second, leaving before the performance had concluded. We then boarded a car, and I took Miss Robinson directly to her home.

Slept Soundly.

"I talked with her there about fifteen minutes, I should judge, and, bidding her goodnight, returned to my boarding house at 60 Poplar Street, in Bellwood. On arrival there, I gave Mrs. Emma Rutherford, my landlady, a dollar, for some work done on my clothes.

"Mrs. Rutherford slipped the bill under her pillow, and I went on to my room and went to bed. And I slept soundly until late Sunday morning.

"The only time I was on Forsyth Street Saturday night was when Miss Robinson and I left the car at Forsyth and Marietta Streets and walked across to the Bijou.

"Horrible Mistake."

"This is absolutely all I know of this affair. I had nothing to do with it, knew nothing of it, and, being a stranger to this dead girl, certainly had no motive for wishing to get her out of the way. It's all a horrible mistake. I'll have no trouble proving an alibi and showing myself innocent."

When Mullinax was locked in a cell at 10 o'clock last night, instructions were given that he not be allowed to communicate with anyone.

GIRL'S GRANDFATHER VOWS VENGEANCE

Standing with bared head in the doorway of his Marietta home, with tears falling unheeded down his furrowed cheeks, W. J. Phagan cried to heaven for vengeance for the murder of his granddaughter, fourteen-year-old Mary Phagan, and vowed that he would not rest until the murderer had been brought to justice.

In a silence unbroken save by the sound of his own sobs and the noise of the gently falling rain, the old man lifted his quavering voice in a passionate plea for the life of the wretch who had lured the little girl into the darkness of a deserted building and strangled her to death. It was an infinite grief—the grief of an old and broken man—that Mr. Phagan expressed when, with hands outspread imploringly, he invoked divine aid in bringing the murderer of the child to justice.

"By the power of the living God," prayed the old man, his voice rising high and clear above the patter of the rain and the roar of a passing train, "I hope the murderer will be dealt with as he dealt with that innocent child. I hope his heart is torn with remorse in the measure that his victim suffered pain and shame; that he suffers as we who loved the child are suffering. No punishment is too great for the brute who foully murdered the sweetest and purest thing on earth—a young girl. Hanging cannot atone for the crime he has committed and the suffering he has caused."

GIRL AND HIS LANDLADY DEFEND MULLINAX

Declaring her belief in the absolute innocence of her sweetheart, Arthur Mullinax, in the murder of Mary Phagan, pretty 16-year-old Pearl Robinson made a pathetic figure as she appeared before Chief of Detectives Lanford this afternoon and accounted for the whereabouts of Mullinax Saturday night up until about 10:30 o'clock.

With Miss Robinson were Mrs. Emma Rutherford, the landlady of Mullinax, and her two sons, Thomas and James, who took up the moves of Mullinax from the time he left Miss Robinson until the next morning, establishing what appears to be a complete alibi. In order to establish the alibi Mrs. Rutherford had to contradict entirely a statement she made last night to th police in which she had said that she knew nothing of where Mullinax was from noon Saturday until Sunday morning.

Call Mullinax "Good Boy."

"Arthur is a good boy," said his loyal little sweetheart.

"I know he would do nothing bad. He was too good and true. He was with me Saturday night from 8 o'clock until nearly 11 o'clock. We went to the Bijou theater together and left before it was over. We got home about 10:30 o'clock.

"Arthur stayed for ten or fifteen minutes, talking to me, and then he started for his rooming house, which is only a short distance from where I live.

"I stayed on the porch a few moments and I could hear him whistling as he went down the street and turned into Poplar Street, where he lives. When the whistle died out, I judged that he had reached home.

"I have known Arthur for about five months and have gone around to different places with him. He always has been kind and good, and a perfect gentleman. I never heard him mention the name of the Phagan girl, except the time he was in an amateur entertainment with her.

"I know he couldn't have committed the crime about which he has been questioned."

Landlady Changes Statement.

Veering directly from her former statements and, in conjunction with Miss Robinson, establishing an apparently unshakable alibi for Mullinax, Mrs. Rutherford told the police detectives that Mullinax had come to her home, 60 Poplar Street, where he roomed, Saturday night shortly before 11 o'clock. She said that she was asleep at the time, but that her 15-year-old daughter heard Mullinax come in and saw him leave $1 for a payment on some clothes he was purchasing.

He went to his room and a few minutes later her son, James Rutherford, came in and found him asleep in the bed which they both occupied, according to Mrs. Rutherford.

Thomas Rutherford, another son, went to Mullinax's coat about 11:30 o'clock to get ea cigarette. Mullinax aws asleep, he said, and he was still asleep at 5 o'clock in the morning, according to James.

Mrs. Rutherford said that her excitement at the presence of the detectives was responsible for her other statement in which she declared she had seen nothing of Mullinax from noon Saturday until Sunday morning.

"I was so confused that I didn't know what I was talking about," she said. In her first statement to the police she said that Mullinax paid her the $1 Saturday noon and left the house. From this time until Sunday morning, she said, she knew nothing of his whereabouts.

Bed Found in Factory Wall.

Another important discovery was made this morning by detectives who continued their search of the basement of the National Pencil Company's building on Forsyth Street.

Built into the wall on one side of the basement, the police found a secret compartment, in which was a cot, improvised from old boards and a blanket. The footprints of a woman, found near the cot, is evidence that some woman had been in the small room recently. There were also signso f a struggle, the earth in front of the cot being disturbed. Several large footprints, presumably those of a man, were found near the cot.

The coroner's jury was shown this room when it made an investigation of the plant this morning.

Based on the finding of the cot in the secret room, the police have evolved a theory that the room has been used as a rendezvous, and that the negro janitor, Newt Lee, knew of any permitted its use.

Employees Severely Quizzed.

J. A. White, 59 Bonnie Brae Avenue, and Harry Denham, 660 East Fair Street, were put through a severe quiz to-day by the police detectives in an effort to find out if they had any knowledge of the circumstances leading up to the murder.

Both are employees of the pencil company and they were the only workmen in the building Saturday, so far as is known. The others were off because of Memorial Day.

They said they were working on the fourth floor from about 9 o'clock in the morning until about 3 o'clock in the afternoon, but that they saw no girls about the factory while they were there.

The police are investigating the statement of White, who said he had heard one of the girl employees say that the front doors of the building were seen open at 8:30 o'clock Saturday night. Newt Lee, the negro watchman, who is supposed to keep the doors barred and locked, will be asked to explain this if it is true.

They said they had talked with Leo Frank, the superintendent, about 1 o'clock in the afternoon and that he had told them to go at 3 o'clock.

Man Forcing Girl Along.

Charles Hall, of 25 White Oak Street, a chauffeur for the sanitary department, believes that he saw the girl being led by a man toward the pencil factory at about 12 o'clock Saturday night.

He said to-day that he drove his brother and a friend to Alabama and Forsyth Streets at midnight, where they took an East Poin street car. He went into a Greek fruit stand nearby and when he came out he was attracted by the sight of a man apparently having trouble in forcing the girl to accompany him.

Hall declares that he would know the man again if he saw him, and will go to headquarters to look at Gant this afternoon.

NEIGHBORS OF SLAIN GIRL CRY FOR VENGEANCE

Slaying of Mary Phagan Arouses Friends of Family to Threats of Violence.

"I wouldn't have liked to be held responsible for the fate of the murderer of little Mary Phagan if the men in this neighborhood had got hold of him last night," was the statement to-day of George W. Epps, 246 Fox Street, whose home adjoins that of Mrs. Coleman, mother of the slain girl.

By to-day the first hot wave of indignation that cried for the blood of the criminal had had time to subside, but the feeling still ran high in the neighborhood of the Coleman home.

The murder was the sole topic of conversation. Men who knew the family and others who had seen Mary go to her work in the morning congregated in excited groups on the street corners. At first they were not willing that the law should take its course. They feared that the murderer, if he were caught, might in some way escape the consequences of his crime.

Sympathy for Stricken Mother.

In the homes of the shocked community the women talked in hushed tones of the tragic end of Mary Phagan. Might not their own innocent little girls be in danger of the same fate? Was it safe to permit them to go alone about the city, even in the light of broad day? They were filled with gratitude that it was not any one of their homes on which the pall of the great tragedy had fallen, but their hearts went out in sympathy for the stricken mother.

Some of them were with their husbands in the first cry for vengeance that went up when the news of the crime was brought to the neighborhood. They saw the imminent danger hovering over the childhood of the city. They saw the peril of their own little ones. The author of the black crime must be punished as he deserved, and at once, they insisted.

To-day they are saying that the young working girls of the city are considered the rightful prey of the beasts in men's clothes that go about the city.

Tragedy Comes Home to Them.

"We are all working people out here," said Mr. Epps, who was standing in a group of his neighbors. "In half the homes the boys and girls do what they can to help in the support of the family. This means that our children are not safe on the streets, even in the daytime.

"The tragedy comes home to us all, for we are all in a little community here. It is a little village in itself, and every one knows every one else. It was a hard blow to us when we learned the terrible story of Mary Phagan's death. Hardly a one of us but knew the little girl, at least by sight.

"The men here were aflame with indignation last night. It would have gone hard with the murderer of the little girl if they could have got their hands on him."

Georgia Doctor Will Set Masonic Record

J. P. Bowdoin, of Adairsville, to Head Both Grand Chapter and Grand Council.

MACON, GA., April 28.—For the first time in the history of Masonry in Georgia one man will this year hold the highest office in both the Grand Chapter of Royal Arch Masons and the Grand Council of the Royal and Select Masters. He is Dr. J. P. Bowdoin, of Adairsville.

This week he will be made grand high priest of the Grand Chapter, succeeding Dr. W. E. England, of Cedartown, and grand master of the Grand Council, succeeding Rev. A. E. Sansburn, of Eatonton. These two organizations will meet here to-morrow and Wednesday, with about 500 Masons in attendance.

The twelfth annual session of the Order of the Eastern Star will meet at the same time, with 78 chapters, represented by about 150 delegates.

CHORUS GIRLS IN MACON HAVE PTOMAINE POISONING

MACON, GA., April 28.—Six chorus girls of a tabloid musical comedy company are in the hospital, two critically ill from ptomaine poisoning. Arriving in the city last night, the troupe went to a cafe for supper. An hour later the young women were seized with convulsions. City authorities are trying to ascertain what kind of food was eaten and how it became infected.

Where and With Whom Was Mary Phagan Before End?

Detectives to-day are using all their resources to learn where Mary Phagan was every minute of Saturday and Saturday night, whom she saw, with whom she talked, and what she said.

There are wide blanks in the story of her movements. These must be filled.

12:10 p. m.—Mary Phagan appeared at the National Pencil Factory at ten or fifteen minutes after 12 o'clock noon, Saturday, and drew the pay due her, $1.60. She chatted a few minutes with friends. The manager is sure she then left the building.

She told her mother she was going to see the Memorial Day parade.

Did she go straight from the factory to see the procession? Who joined her? Where did she stand? When the procession had passed, where did she go? Did someone, that early in the day, start weaving around her the net which later caused her death?

10 p. m.—E. S. Skipper, 224 1-2 Peters Street, saw a girl answering the description of Mary Phagan at about 10 o'clock Saturday night. She was walking up Pryor Street near Trinity with three youths. She was crying, and seemed to be trying to get away from her companions. She seemed to be under the influence of an opiate, not of drink.

Was this, in truth, Mary Phagan? If so, who were the youths? Where had they been, and where did they go?

12:30 a. m.—E. L. Sentell, who had known Mary Phagan nearly all her life, saw her with a man he identifies as Arthur Mullinax, walking north on Forsyth Street near Hunter at about 12:30 o'clock Sunday morning. The girl was tired and angry. She spoke to him.

Did she and her companion go at once to the pencil factory?

If not, where did they go?

3 a. m.—The mutilated body of Mary Phagan was found in a dark corner of the National Pencil Factory basement, 37-39 South Forsyth Street, by the night watchman.

Here are the gaps—from 12:15 Saturday afternoon to 10 o'clock Saturday night. From 10 o'clock Saturday night to 12:30 o'clock Sunday morning. From 12:30 o'clock Sunday morning until 3 o'clock Sunday morning.

When the police and detectives have filled in these blanks, the murderer of Mary Phagan will be known.

Lifelong Friend Saw Girl and Man After Midnight

Edgar L. Sentell, twenty-one years old, a clerk employed in C. J. Kamper's store, and whose home is at 82 Davis Street, was one of the first to give the detectives a hopeful clue to the solution of the hideous mystery.

Sentell, a well-known young man, had known Mary Phagan almost all her life. When she was just beginning to think of dolls with never a thought of dreary factories and the tragedies of life, he used to see her playing in the streets of East Point when her folks lived there. She was a pleasant, cheerful little girl then and her later years—tragically brief—had not changed her. Her light blue eyes laughed at the world in those days with all the roguishness a Georgia country girl's can, and the cares and worries that came when she had to make her own pitiful living had not obliterated their smile.

It was 30 minutes after midnight, when Sentell, going home from his work at Kamper's saw Mary Phagan coming down Forsyth Street near Hunter.

Outside of the stragglers about the cheap hotels in that district, there were few on the streets at that time. The intermittent lights of cheap fruit and soda water stands, the flickering flame of a whistling peanut roaster here and there, added enough light to the dull glow of the city lamps to make pedestrians easily distinguishable.

Mary Phagan, at that hour of the night, was a conspicuous figure. Fourteen-year-old girls on the streets of Atlanta at midnight are not so plentiful that they're not noticed.

Sentell, then, walking south on Forsyth Street saw Mary Phagan approaching him. She was walking at a medium gait on the inside of the pavement.

On the curb side of the pavement parallel with her, keeping step with her, but exchanging no words, walked a tall slender man.

Exchanged "Hellos."

Sentell looked at him more or less casually but sharply enough to describe him later to the detectives.

"Hello, Mary" said Sentell.

"Hello, Edgar" said Mary.

That was all. Sentell kept on his way. The couple, now behind him, were swallowed up in the gloom of Forsyth Street.

To Sentell, Mary Phagan looked as if she was tired or angry. That the man of mystery was her companion he had no doubt. As Sentell described him later to the police:

He was six feet tall or over.

His hair was black and curly and his face, not unattractive, was of dark complexion.

He wore a blue suit and tan shoes and a straw hat.

He was of slender build and appeared to be about twenty-five years old.

At 9 o'clock yesterday morning Sentell was on a street car when he heard that a girl named Mary Phagan had been found murdered. He hurried to her home and found his fears were verified. With a boy friend of the victim's sister he hastened to Chief Lanford's office and on his clue the detective department got busy at once.

It is known that Mary Phagan came to the city a few minutes after noon on Saturday and left an English Avenue car at the corner of Broad and Hunter Streets. Motorman W. M. Matthews knew the girl from having had her as a passenger on his car a number of times and says positively that she left his car at the corner of Broad and Hunter Streets and that he saw her walking up Hunter Street in the direction of Forsyth. Conductor W. T. Hollis was in charge of the car that reached the corner of Marietta and Broad at 12:07 o'clock Saturday afternoon and says that he knew the little girl and that she was a passenger on the trip into the city. He was relieved at the corner of Marietta and Broad and does not know anything further about the movements of the child, although he says that he is sure that she was still on the car when it left the corner going south on Broad Street.

Another Sees Companion.

It was reported to the detectives that Conductor Guy Kennedy of the English Avenue line had admitted having brought a young girl, answering the description of the little victim into the city on his car about 6:45 o'clock Saturday afternoon, and had later seen her in company with a man on the streets. He is said to have furnished the detectives with a description of the mysterious stranger but when seen by a Georgian reporter declined to make any statement other than that he had seen Chief Beavers and that the Chief had asked that he not say anything about it to anyone. He admitted, however, that he had seen the man again yesterday afternoon and the man had told him that he had been out with another girl Saturday night.

Having seen the man at least twice and talked with him once, Kennedy will undoubtedly be able to recognize him.

TARIFF BILL WILL AID G.O.P.-PAYNE

WASHINGTON, April 28.—The flood of campaign-flavored tariff oratory in the House began to ebb to-day and by to-night the set speeches will have been exhausted. To-morrow the House will get down to actual consideration of the Underwood bill under the five-minute rule.

The headliner to-day on the Republican side was Representative Payne, of New York, author of the present law which the Democrats plan to do away with. Payne defended his bill and asserted the pending Democratic measure would work enough havoc to the industries of the country to assure the return of a Republican House in the next Congressional election.

Representative Rainey, of Illinois, Democratic member of the Ways and Means Committee, defended the income tax and made an attack upon "swollen fortunes."

He declared that swollen fortunes in this country are "based on franchises, tariff protection or patents." Few fortunes, he asserted, had been accumulated except through Federal favors of some kind.

ATLANTA GETS ASSURANCE OF OPERA IN 1914

Telegram From Kahn Intimates That Backers of Metropolitan Company May Attend.

Otto H. Kahn, chairman of the board of directors of the Metropolitan Opera Company, has assured Colonel W. L. Peel, president of the Atlanta Music Festival Association, in a telegram made public to-day, that the great musical organization will be only too glad to appear again in Atlanta next year.

The telegram indicates that Mr. Kahn and other New York directors, leaders in the financial world and foremost backers of grand opera, intend to be present.

Colonel Peel telegraphed Mr. Kahn late Saturday night, advising him of the splendid success of the week. Mr. Kahn's reply was soon forthcoming and the warmth of his words demonstrates his entire satisfaction. This is his complete reply to Colonel Peel:

Directors Here Next Year.

Mr. W. L. Peel, Atlanta Music Festival Association, Atlanta, Ga.:

Delighted with your telegram. Many thanks in the name of all directors and on behalf of Metropolitan Opera Company to yourself and your associates and your splendid and inspiring public. I knew that all the artists would give their very best to Atlanta and am delighted at your public's wonderful response, demonstrating once more its understanding and love for operatic art. Our only regretful thought is that we were unable to spend this week among our friends in Atlanta; but we are looking forward with the most pleasurable anticipations to the privilege of doing so next year. Kindest regards and best remembrances to you all.

OTTO H. KAHN.

Peel Compliments Operagoers.

"I want to emphasize," said Colonel Peel. "Everybody connected in any way with the achievements of the week has done his duty.

"Our people have responded nobly. Friends have come in large numbers from every section of the South to help us, and to all of them I return sincere thanks for their inspiring presence and valued support.

"And to our loyal newspapers, those makers of public opinion, I can not say too much. They have opened to us their columns. Their writers and reporters have not only caught the fire of the divine music, but they have thrilled the minds and hearts of others. To them our association and the musical public owe a debt of gratitude which it is pleasing to admit, but difficult to repay."

Lane Too Busy to Accept High Honor

Secretary of the Interior Cannot Go to California to Receive Degree of LL. D.

WASHINGTON, April 28.—Secretary of the Interior Franklin K Lane has been forced by pressure of public business to decline an invitation from Dr. Benjamin Ide Wheeler, president of the University of California, to receive the highest honor within the gift of the university, the degree of LL. D.

At that time it is the intention of the University of California to confer the degree upon Colonel George W. Goethals, chairman of the Isthmian Canal Commission, and the directing genius of construction work upon the Panama Canal.

JAMESON PROBABLY WILL DECLINE ARKANSAS OFFER

MACON, GA., April 28.—Rev. S. Y. Jameson, president of Mercer University, is considering the offer made by Ouachita Baptist College of Arkadelphia, Ark. He probably will decline it.

Augustan Held as Thief Blames Races

Aged Man, Charged With Misappropriating $14,000 Belonging to Ward, Arrested at Track.

AUGUSTA, GA., April 28.—A Deputy Sheriff left to-day for Baltimore to bring back to Augusta A. J. Gouley, the aged Augusta man who is charged with misappropriating funds of an estate of which he was trustee, and also as guardian for a minor child, Miss Agnes Kernaghan.

The amount involved is $14,000. The company who was on Gouley's bond made the shortage good.

Gouley had been missing since May 1, 1912, and had been traced to Ireland, back to New York and to many places throughout the United States. The detectives finally arrested him at the Havre DeGrace race track in Maryland. He is reported to have said that gambling was the cause of his downfall.

Climax in Church Contest Sunday

The climax of the great Sunday school attendance contest between the Second Baptist and the First Christian Churches will be reached next Sunday morning at a joint session in the Auditorium instead of in the church that won the contest. The attendance at both schools has increased to such an extent that neither church is large enough.

The event promises to be so striking that motion picture men have announced that they will have films made of the children marching to the Auditorium.

The principal speakers will be Dr. John E. White, pastor of the Second Baptist Church, and John S. Spalding, superintendent of the Sunday school, and Dr. L. C. Bricker, pastor of the First Christian Church, and C. V. LeCraw, superintendent of the Sunday school.

Attendance at the Baptist school yesterday was 1,640 and at the Christian 1,946. Since the contest was started the Baptist school has gained 488 and the Christian school 326.

10,000 THRONG MORGUE TO SEE BODY OF VICTIM

Coroner's Jury Inspects Remains and Scene of Tragedy, Then Waits Until Wednesday.

Lying on a slab in the chapel of the Bloomfield undertaking establishment, with the white throat bearing the red marks of the rope that strangled her, the body of Mary Phagan was viewed by thousands this morning.

No such gathering of the morbidly curious has ever before been seen in Atlanta. More people were attracted than by any crime in the history of the city. The crowds came in droves, and a steady procession passed before the slab on which lay the little body. Old men and young men, women with babies in their arms and women who tottered with age, little friends of the dead child and little children who had to be raised in the arms of their mothers before they could see the white face of their dead playmate—crowded into the little chapel.

Crowd Before Daybreak

Long before daylight the crowd began to form in front of the undertaking establishment. By 6 o'clock several hundred had come, and were awaiting with tense eagerness for the opening of the doors. Factory girls and laboring men, passing on their way to work, were caught by the lure of the tragedy and crowded into the line. A number of fashionably dressed women alighted from their automobiles, and with veils drawn over their faces pressed against the plate glass windows of the chapel.

By 8 o'clock there were more than 1,000 persons gathered around the morgue. The jam at the doorway was so great that extra policemen were called. When the doors were opened the crowd was permitted to pass in one by one and view the form.

An old man, who had known the Phagan family for years and had rocked the dead child on his knees, was the first to view the remains. For more than three minutes he stood with bared head beside the body.

It is estimated that 10,000 people have viewed the body of the child since it was found in the basement of the building on Forsyth Street. All day yesterday thousands of people crowded into the little chapel, and P. J. Bloomfield declared that no less than 4,000 persons entered his place during the day.

This morning the crowd was even greater, and since 6 o'clock it is estimated that between 6,000 and 7,000 have passed in silent review before the dead child.

Inquest Is Begun.

At 10 o'clock, when Coroner Donehoo began the inquest, the chapel was cleared of the spectators and the body of the child removed to a private room. The men impaneled to inquire into the death of the child were:

Homer C. Ashford, foreman; John Miller, J. C. Hood, C. Y. Sheets, Glenn Dewberry and Clarence Langford.

No witnesses were examined this morning by the Coroner's jury. The six men viewed the remains and were shown by physicians the manner in which the child met her death, after which they visited the plant of the National Pencil Company, where the murder occurred. There they made a thorough examination of the basement where the child's body was found, inspected the tip plant on the second floor, where the bloody strands of hair were found, and followed the trail of blood through the building to the scene of the crime.

At noon Coroner Donehoo dismissed the jury until Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock, when the examination of witnesses will take place. The Coroner refused to give out a list of the persons he had summoned before the jury.

NEW JUDGESHIP ALLOWED IN SOUTHERN CIRCUIT

WASHINGTON, April 28.—The bill granting an additional judge for the Fourth circuit passed the Senate today. The circuit comprises the States of West Virginia, Maryland, Virginia, North and South Carolina.

An amendment was added abolishing the circuit judgeship held by Judge R. W. Archbold, removed from the Commerce Court by impeachment.

Chief and Sleuths Trace Steps in Slaying of Girl

In the room where Mary Phagan was attacked and paid out her young life to the brutality of her assailant, across the floor where her limp form was dragged, down the stairs and down through the square trap-door into the dirty basement where her body was found, Chief of Police Beavers and two detectives trailed, step by step, every move of the girl's murderer to-day.

Determined that not a clew should be overlooked in the efforts to fix guilt upon the man or men that took the young girl's life, the Chief and his aides began at the very spot in the tip plant in the rear of the second floor where the bloodstains and the strands of matted hair indicated that the girl had put up such a deperate fight for her life and honor.

Curious Crowd About Factory.

Meanwhile the surging crowd of curiosity seekers on the outside of the building would not be restrained, and that with the excitement of the employees made it necessary to close down the factory for the day.

Excited men in the throng, morbidly curious or filled with wrath at the inhuman deed, forced their way into the building and refused to turn back. A detective had an encounter with one insistent man who would not leave the building.

Inside the building the nervous tension of the employees was apparent in every department. With the ghost of the terrible crime stalking about, they could not work. After several hours of ineffectual work, the foremen saw that the girls and other employees were so wrought up over the tragedy that it was useless to keep them in the building longer. They were told to go.

Chief Beavers and the detectives, confident that they had established beyond doubt that the crime was committed inside the building by some one who had access, continued their painstaking and minute inspection.

Bloodstains on Floor.

They demonstrated that the stains on the floor were not of red paint, but were of blood. Had the stains been paint, they would have been soluble in alcohol. But when the alcohol was applied the tell-tale splotches only grew the brighter.

Added to this convincing evidence, the Chief had the testimony of employees in the building that these stains were not there Saturday when the building was cleaned up for the week. They must have come some time between Saturday and the time that they were discovered this morning. For the purpose of conclusive analysis, the Chief had pieces of the floor chiseled up and taken to headquarters.

The detectives believe they have solved the manner in which the assailant made his escape from the building. A staple in the rear door of the basement was found drawn entirely from the wood. The door is a sliding affair and the way in which the staple was pulled out leads to the belief that it was accomplished from the inside.

The theory is still held that the murderer gained entrance through a regular doorway and that the nightwatchman, Newt Lee, could tell something of the circumstances if he wished.

Story of the Killing as Meager Facts Reveal It

A new turn was given the mystery to-day when strands of blood-matted hair were found in a lathing machine on the second floor of the factory.

The discovery made it certain that the crime was committed in the factory by some one who had access to the building, a theory which had been without conclusive support previously.

Blood stains leading from the lathe to the door showed the manner in which the fiend had dragged the body of his victim and had taken her to the basement.

Appearances indicated that the murderer had sought to cover up the trail of his crime by endeavoring to efface the bloody stains.

Another name was brought into the case to-day by the testimony of pencil company employees. Detectives were hurried to the building and an arrest is expected momentarily. The new suspect is said to be a former employee who was seen about the building Friday and Saturday.

The blood-matted strands of reddish-brown hair were discovered this forenoon when L. A. Quinn, foreman in the tip plant on the second floor, sent R. P. Barrett, a workman, over to the lathe.

Barrett gave a cry of alarm when he saw the evidences of the shocking crime and of the struggle the little girl apparently had made against the superior strength of her assailant.

The hair was twisted about the turn-up screw on the lathe, a crank-like device which is used to move the pencils forward and backward on the machine.

Evidence of Terrible Struggle.

Blood was on the sharp end of the crank, leading to the belief that it had been used as a weapon and was responsible for the gash in the back of the Phagan girl's head. The alternative theory is that she fell back against it in her struggles.

The mutilated body of Mary Phagan was found in a dark, dismal corner of the pencil factory basement shortly after 3 o'clock yesterday morning by Newt Lee, the negro night watchman. The negro said he almost stumbled against the body before he saw it. In the dim, flickering light of the watchman's lantern the tragedy was revealed in all its ghastliness.

The girlish form lay amid the trash and sweepings of the basement with bruised and bloody face upturned, in a pool of blood, and with the freshly laundered dress of but a few hours before dyed crimson.

All about was the evidence of a terrific struggle. The dilapidated condition of the dead girl's clothing and the signs of confusion on the dirty basement floor told the tragic story of the girl's battle for life.

Fought Till She Swooned.

She had fought her brutal murderer until the last—until her strength had given out and she had swooned into death.

The body lay at a point about 75 feet from an elevator shaft. Midway between the body and the shaft, on a pile of trash, was found one of the girl's shoes—the one from her left foot—and her hat. The slayer had torn the shoe and hat from the little form as the girl struggled vainly to save herself from his blows.

About the girl's neck was tightly drawn a strong piece of twine. A strip of cloth, torn from her underclothing, was also fastened about her neck. Not satisfied with the blows he had dealt on the head—one blow on the back of the head being so terrific as to discolor one of the girl's eyes—the slayer had resorted to strangulation to be sure that the last spark of life had been extinguished. A big twine had been drawn so tightly that it was imbedded in the tender flesh, leaving the throat and neck discolored and lacerated.

City Chemist Tests Stains For Blood

Pieces of wood, the stains on which are believed to be those of the blood of murdered Mary Phagan, are undergoing a chemical examination this afternoon by the city chemist.

The discovery of white powder on the factory floor strengthened the belief that a frantic effort had been made to erase the evidences of the crime. The powder resembled very much cleaning preparations that are used.

CLAN O'HARA, IN ANNUAL BURIAL, GRIEVE OVER 7

Several Hundred Members of Nomadic Tribe Are in Atlanta for Ceremony.

Bound by the tie of grief in death, several hundred men, women and children made up an odd procession to Oakland Cemetery this morning. They were members of the tribe of nomad Irish horse traders, known everywhere as the Clan O'Hara, and they were burying their dead who had died in the last year.

The tribe has been in Atlanta several weeks, waiting for the day of the funerals. They came here from the North, and from the West, travelling over the country in big wagon cabins. Atlanta is their burial ground, and they come each year for the rites.

The tribe members followed seven coffins to the cemetery to-day, tiny white coffins of children, larger white coffins in which lay the bodies of young girls, and one large black casket, within which was the body of one of the grandmothers of the tribe. All the dead were women. Four are young children, two are mature women, and one is a girl-woman, 19 year-old Mrs. Mamie Nelson, who in years youthful was a wife and mother. Her body has been in Atlanta since last June, awaiting the day of burial. The bodies of the others have been here less than that time, in the chapel of Greenberg & Bond, to whom the nomads always intrust the details of their tribal burial.

Father Kennedy, in the Church of the Immaculate Conception, conducted the services this morning. From the church the tribe made its way to Oakland Cemetery, where the ceremony was concluded at the lot which the tribe owns.

Wagons Bear Mourners.

The funeral procession was unique. Behind the somber line of hearses it came, the free wanderers, riding in carriages and wagons that have known the road. Sturdy and weather-beaten, the vehicles were typical of the people they bore. A number of the tribe rode in unwonted automobiles.

Months that have elapsed since the death of most of those who were buried to-day have not served to lessen the grief of the tribe, it seemed to-day. In the long line of carriages were many women who crooned and wept. Very young children were frightened and quiet, older children frankly crying. Here and there a man, to whom probably one of the seven was very near and dear, was sobbing loudly; most of the men, though, rode with faces set and stern.

No Expense Spared.

The tribe, reputed to be wealthy, spares no expense in the burial of its dead. The caskets were elaborate and costly, the hearses were luxuriantly fitted, and every other appointment of the ceremony was in keeping.

The tribe members probably will begin to leave Atlanta immediately, now that the ceremony that brought them to this city is over. Next year they will see each other here again, at the last of April, when the same solemn occasion will come, and the same tie of death will be revealed. It is the one tie among the members, and it keeps them close together in heart.

The dead buried to-day were Mrs. Mamie Nelson, age 19, who died in Montgomery, Ala.; Mrs. Bridget Sherlock, who died at Sparks, Ga., October 1, 1912; Bridget Costella, age 2 years, who died at Blackshear, Ga., November 4, 1912; Maggie Carroll, age 14, died at Alene, Ga., September 15, 1912; Annie Sherlock, age 49, died at Baxley, Ga., October 15, 1912; Bridget Mack, age 18 months, died in Alabama, and Mrs. Bridget O'Hara, who died in Savannah.

Lillian Lorraine and Movie Owner Rewed

Show Girl Becomes Mrs. Frederick W. Gresheimer Second Time in Thirteen Months.

NEW YORK, April 28.—Lillian Lorraine, whose "swing song" in the "Follies of 1910" lifted her into the front rank of stage celebrities, again is the bride of Frederick W. Gresheimer, a moving picture and real estate man. Their marriage Friday was their second in thirteen months.

"Yes," Miss Lorraine told a reporter, "we were married again. You know Mr. Gresheimer and I went through a ceremony a year ago last month, but the fact that he was not free from his former marriage made it illegal. Oh! I can't explain. It was something about the law."

As to her possible return to the stage Mrs. Gresheimer is undecided.

FRATS ONLY 'TOLERATED' AT MERCER, SAYS HEAD

MACON, April 28.—The attitude of the officials of Mercer University toward the Greek letter "frats" is made known by President S. Y. Jameson in reply to the executive committee of the Kappa Sigma Fraternity, which sought permission to name a local adviser whose duties it would be to bring the members of this frat and the faculty into a closer relation.

"Frats are only tolerated at Mercer," replied Dr. Jameson.

High Rental as Vice Cause to Be Probed

Illinois White Slave Committee Will Force Landlords to Tell of Their Profits.

CHICAGO, April 28.—High rent as a cause of immorality of women will be the subject of inquiry by the Illinois Senate white slave committee this week.

"High rental exhausts a family's ability to provide healthful recreation," said Lieutenant Governor O'Hara. "It compels many to live in insufficient quarters, deprives young girls of needed privacy and lowers their pride. It also exhausts the family's vitality so that parents have not the opportunity to devote to their children the time and attention necessary to steer them clear of temptation."

Landlords will be summoned to tell of their profits, and experts will be heard on the actual valuation of the property on which high rentals are charged.

Spring Guano Sales Largest Ever Known

Heavy Rains Cause of Record-Breaking Movement During the Past Week.

Commercial fertilizers experienced a heavier movement last week than at any time during the season. The unusually heavy demand is believed to have resulted from the heavy rains, which delayed the farmers with their work.

Fertilizer men are expecting this week to prove the banner week in sales, indications pointing to a heavy demand as the season nears an end. The total amount of fertilizer used by Georgia cotton planters this season is expected to surpass by a great figure the records of former years.

Air Tragedy Claims British Lieutenant

Biplane Stops Suddenly 400 Feet Above Earth, Then Plunges Downward—Cause a Mystery.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

FARNBOROUGH, ENGLAND, April 28.—Lieutenant Rogers Harrison, British Army aviator, was killed here to-day by a fall of 400 feet in the Cody biplane which won the $25,000 army prize last year.

Lieutenant Harrison, one of the most daring of the aviation corps, was maneuvering over the aerodome here when the machine suddenly stopped, hung suspended, then dropped suddenly.

The biplane was considered one of the best in the world. Experts can not account for the accident.

ARRAIGNS DIXIE FOR SLAVERY OF MILL CHILDREN

Dr. A. J. McKelway Takes the South to Task for Conditions. Great Congress Meetings.

A scathing arraignment of the Southern States for permitting what he terms the slavery of children in the mills and factories by Dr. A. J. McKelway, of Washington, Southern secretary of the National Child Labor Congress, formed the big feature of the departmental conferences of the Southern Sociological Congress this morning.

Dr. McKelway spoke on "The Extent of Child Labor in the South" at the conference on child welfare at the First Methodist Church, the most important meeting of the day. In addition to Dr. McKelway's forceful exposition of the child labor problem in the South and his remedial suggestions, other addresses on the subject were given. Principal J. A. Burns, of Oneida, Ky., known throughout the United States as "Burns of the Mountains," spoke on "The Children of the Southern Highlands."

Other conferences this morning were as follows:

Organized charities, at the Wesley Memorial Church; courts and prisons, at the First Baptist Church Sunday school room; public health, at the First Baptist Church; travelers' aid, at the First Methodist Church Sunday school room; church and social service, at the Central Congregational Church; race problems, at the Baptist Tabernacle.

Great Sessions Held.

Although one of the principal speakers failed to arrive, the two general sessions of the Sociological Congress held yesterday afternoon and evening at the Auditorium and at the Wesley Memorial Church are considered the greatest sociological gatherings in the history of the work. Fifteen hundred people heard addresses by men who have devoted their lives to educating America along civic, economic and moral lines.

The speaker who failed to arrive was Richmond P. Hobson, Congressman from Alabama. Mr. Hobson was delayed by a storm on the Chesapeake, where he was a spectator at the navy target practice, and it is doubtful if he will come to Atlanta at all.

A stirring address on "The Social Program of the Church," by Dr. Walter Rauschenbush, one of America's greatest sociologists, was the big feature of the afternoon session. Dr. Rauschenbush declared that the church could and should do much toward solving the child labor problem—the greater problem, he declared, that confronts the people of the Southland.

What 'Thy Kingdom Come' Means.

Dr. Owen R. Lovejoy, of New York, general secretary of the National Child Labor Committee, spoke on "The Gospel for Modern Industry."

"'Thy kingdom come,'" declared Dr. Lovejoy, "means the coming of the day when child labor will be done away with, when every little tot shall have its quota of sunlight and happiness, of hours of play and recreation. The time will come eventually when the little ones will get their share of the joys of life—when the men and women of this country will awake to the awful curse of child labor—and that time is not far off."

With a brilliant plea for a bureau of vital statistics in Georgia, Miss Julia Lathrop, director of the Federal Children's Bureau, at Washington, D. C., delivered a strong address at the evening session of the congress.

"Europe, to maintain its armies, must know of the advent of each child," Miss Lathrop said, "and if this information is valuable in maintaining armies, how much more valuable it would be in times of peace."

Others who delivered addresses yesterday included Bishop Wilbur Thirkield, of New Orleans, and Dr. T. M. Moore, of Toronto, Canada.

THE SOCIAL WORLD

Miss Helen Payne, whose marriage to Mr. Charles T. Hopkins, Jr., takes place to-morrow evening, was honor guest at a luncheon given by Mr. and Mrs. Charles T. Hopkins to-day at the Capital City Club. The guests were limited to members of the two families. The central decoration for the table was of daisies, arranged in a basket adorned with tulle bows.

Miss Payne wore a semi-tailored gown of hyacinth blue matelasse over a white chiffon blouse. Her smart hat of black taffeta was trimmed in goura feathers.

Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. J. Carroll Payne, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Smith, Jr., Miss Nancy Hill Hopkins, Mr. Charles T. Hopkins, Jr., and other family members.

On account of the recent illness of the bride-elect, all entertaining for her has been postponed until the return from the bridal trip.

'A RANDOLPH,' SAYS WOMAN ENIGMA

Accused of Thefts From Society, Mysterious Suspect Relates Strange History.

NEW YORK, April 28.—"Mrs. Fitzhugh," awaiting trial on a charge of stealing mesh bags from society women and whose real identity has puzzled the police of several cities, today disclosed a part of her life history.

"I belong to the 'Fighting Randolphs of Virginia,'" she said, "and when my case goes to trial my real and unquestioned standing will be known.

"The statement that I am Catherine Fennell, a notorious woman known to the police of Washington, is absolutely false. I was born near Manassas, Va.

"I was educated in a convent and after graduation went to Chicago. I married Fitzhugh Randolph. He died, and when I returned to Fairfax, Va., I went to the Western State Hospital in Staunton, Va., where I recovered from a fever.

"In 1911 I married Alfred S. Northrup, a Government lawyer in Washington."

Jack London Goes Into the "Movies"

Author Will Play the Hero in All of His Dramatized Stories.

LOS ANGELES, April 28.—Jack London will enact in motion pictures all of his novels and short stories. He made a deal by which a local concern gets the exclusive use of London's stories in motion pictures all over the world.

"I shall appear as the leading actor in all my own short stories and novals, dramatized into motion pictures," said London. "I am going into the pictures to give them 'the punch' that is almost impossible to communicate to another."

Poor Bettors Carry Eggs Up Mountain

And in a Spoon, at That, Whistling on Way, to Pay Election Wager.

PASADENA, April 28.—Toiling up the precipitous foot trail to the top of Mount Wilson, whistling ditties at intervals of 200 yards and bearing hens' eggs in tablespoons, John Creighton, of Los Angeles, and Abe Sanders, a Minnesotan, paid a long deferred election bet to Edwin Carleton.

The victims had six months in which to discharge their indebtedness and staved off payments as long as consistent.

Creighton required five and a half hours to make the trip of seven and one-tenth miles from Sierra Madre, and Sanders was nearly two hours behind him.

ARKANSAS CAPITOL SUIT GOES TO HIGHEST COURT

LITTLE ROCK, ARK., April 28.—The State Supreme Court to-day affirmed the lower court's judgment against Caldwell & Drake, former State Capitol contractors, who had sued former Governor George W. Donaghey and four other members of the State Capitol Commission for $250,000 alleged damages for refusing to allow them to finish the new State Capitol in 1909. The contractors held Donaghey and the other defendants were acting under an unconstitutional statute. The contractors will appeal to the United States Supreme Court.

RIOTS FEARED IN ASHEVILLE STRIKE

Strikebreakers Will Be Put on Street Cars Under Guard of Police and Troops.

ASHEVILLE, N. C., April 28.—For the second day not a wheel has turned to-day in the street car strike, and indications are that no cars will be operated for 24 hours to come. The town is now in a state of great excitement, and trouble is expected at almost any moment.

Two carloads of strikebreakers, brought to town yesterday afternoon, are camping under guard in the woods. They will go on board street cars, under protection of police, deputy sheriffs and members of the National Guard. The strikebreakers were denied admission by the hotels.

This morning the statement was made by the company that cars will be operated if State troops have to be brought to prevent violence. The Mayor of Asheville, J. E. Rankin, insists that the strikebreakers be hurried back to Jersey City as rapidly as they were brought here.

Last night the strike was discussed at a mass meeting by dozens of ministers, lawyers, business and laboring men. The striking motormen and conductors attended services at a local church, where there is a revival going on, in a body this morning.

Souls Are Sold for Clothes, Says Poteat

Carolina College President Scores Society for Making Body "Rack for Fashions."

Dr. W. L. Poteat, president of Wake Forest College, North Carolina, speaking at the Second Baptist Church yesterday, declared that both men and women were daily selling their souls for clothes.

"Think of it," said he, "the beautiful body, great and noble, is used as a display rack for the fashions. It is made secondary to clothes. And your social set adopts clothes as its standard.

"This is one of the most insidious hindrances to-day in the work of social uplift. It is a bar that separates the strata of society."

Dr. Poteat also said in the course of his address:

"Be it said to the everlasting credit of Atlanta that she has stamped out segregated vice. The whole country is watching with open admiration the fight you are making."

Andrews has been kept here for fear he would be lynched at Palmetto.

Sheriff Spencer has offered $300 reward for Andrews, who is the first white man ever sentenced to be hanged in Manatee County. He formerly lived near Greenville, Ala.

SMITH WOULD RAISE PAY OF RURAL MAILMEN

WASHINGTON, April 28.—Senator Hoke Smith, of Georgia, to-day introduced a bill to raise the maximum pay of rural carriers from $1,100 a year to $1,400 a year, the additional $300 being intended to cover the expenses of their teams.

Senator Smith also introduced a bill to increase the rate of interest which banks shall pay on postal savings bank money which the government deposits from 2 1-4 per cent to 3 per cent.

LONDON POKES FUN AT GRAPE BANQUET

U. S. Capital Destined to Be Known as "Wishy Washington," Says Astor's Paper.

LONDON, April 28.—British newspapers comment on Secretary of State Bryan's grape juice dinner to the diplomatic corps in Washington, in honor of James Bryce, the retiring British Ambassador. "Wishy Washington" should be the title of the American capital, according to the Pall Mall Gazette, William Waldorf Astor's paper.

"Official life in Washington under the Wilson-Bryan regime holds out little prospect of gaiety," its editorial says to-day. "We fear that the capital of the great republic is destined to be known as 'Wishy Washington.'"

Commenting upon the dinner, the Daily Express referred to Bryan's policy as "teetotal diplomacy" and said that as a State Minister he had no right to enforce his abstemious ideas on his guests.

The diplomats, said the Express had no choice, since to refuse the Secretary's invitation would have involved them in the suspicion of international discourtesy. Bryan, said the editorial, had no right to do, as Secretary of State, what he could very well have done as a private citizen.

"Playful Girl With Not a Bad Thought"

"She was just a little, playful girl, without a bad thought in her mind, and she has been made the victim of the blackest crime that can be perpetuated," was the bitter denunciation of the assailant of Mary Phagan by her uncle, D. R. Benton, yesterday.

Mary and her mother lived with Mr. Benton at his home near Marietta for several years following the death of Mr. Phagan. Then Mary's mother married J. W. Coleman and the family moved from Marietta to East Point about 1907. Twelve months ago they moved to their little home in Atlanta.

Dreams Parents Are Dying, Finds It True

Woman Rushes to Home to Find Father and Mother Unconscious From Gas.

NEW YORK, April 28.—In answer to the summons of her parents whom she dreamed she saw beckoning to her as they were sinking in a marsh, Mrs. May Allen and her husband, Charles J. Allen, of Newark, called at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Dorley, and found the aged couple in an unconscious condition.

One jet of the gas range was open. Both are expected to die.

TWINS, THEN TRIPLETS.

RAYNE, LA., April 28.—Mrs. Onezia Carter, a planter's wife, gave birth to three daughters to-day. All are living. Just a year ago twin boys were born to her.

Hunt for J. W. Martin Is Kept Up by Police

New "Clues" Received Every Day, but No Result—Pestered by Crazy Clairvoyant.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian

LONDON, April 28.—The Scotland Yard police are still prosecuting their inquiries in regard to the whereabouts of Joseph W. Martin, the missing Memphis cotton dealer, but with no success, although "clues" reach police headquarters every day.

A clairvoyant had so many visions and so persistently pestered the police that she was forcibly ejected from the police office several times. Then she turned her attention to the big London dailies and so impressed the editorial chief of one journal that he kept a man watching a particular house in the heart of slumland two days before he discovered that he was the victim of the illusions of a crazy woman.

CABLE GOSSIP DRAMA HUMOR

SILK HAT HARRY'S DIVORCE SUIT :: It's a Pipe Pa Didn't Like It :: By Tad

These Are Dishes Four and Twenty Songbirds Hailed With Tearful Joy

It is recorded that Pasquale Amato, when he was served a dish of sweetbreads prepared by Joseph Gancel, solemnly arose, found his way into the steaming kitchen at the eGorgian Terrace, and as solemnly embraced its creator.

Monsieur Joseph Gancel will tell you frankly that he cannot sing, nor does he want to. Being chef at the Georgian Terrace, and as solemnly to stifle the muse of song.

And yet there is a common tie between him and the stars of the Metropolitan Opera Company. He, too, is an artist.

The æstheticism of his soul was stirred when Caruso and Bori and the others came to Atlanta and to the Georgian Terrace last week, and out of the turmoil were evolved artistic creations of his kitchen. The presence of his fellow artists inspired him, and here are some of the results, a few of the dishes that he prepared, for them and for them alone. To every opera of the week he respectfully dedicated a new dish.

FILET OF SOLE, MANON LESCAUT: Rase filet of sole in heart shape, and cooked in sauterne wine. Dress the dish in a border of duchesse potatoes, the bottom garnished with cooked fresh green asparagus tips and julienne of truffle. Put the filet of sole on top, cover with Normandie sauce with lobster butter and glaze.

They say that the grand opera stars sang better for Atlanta than before the diamond horseshoe of the Metropolitan Opera House. Is there any wonder.

And here, respectfully dedicated to La Tosca, is a dish of CALF'S SWEETBREADS: Prepare and cook the sweetbreads the same as for larded or glazed form. Put in individual cocottes filled with the bottoms of artichokes and puree of foie gras, the sweetbreads being placed on top. Garnish with small heads of cooked fresh mushrooms. Put in the oven for four minutes, cover with gourmet sauce.

Gancel's Triumph.

It was when Pasquale Amato sat down before this dish, and tasted it that he arose solemnly, found his way into the kitchen, and as solemnly embraced Joseph Gancel.

Souls mingled at the Georgian Terrace, the souls of artists. Purveyors to different organs they were, it is true, but affinities in art. Witness this:

MIGNON OF TENDERLOIN, CYRANO DE BERGERAC: After the mignon is prepared and cooked on one side, prepare and stuff as follows: puree of chicken and foie gras, half and half. One ring of anchovies and stuffed olives on top. Put in oven for a few minutes. Provencale sauce on the bottom of the dish. Garnish on the crown with souffle potatoes.

Most particular Monsieur Gancel was of Caruso's taste, for Caruso is possessed of a connoisseur's discrimination.

"He has the appreciation, the knowledge," exclaimed the chef. The grand opera stars felt somewhat the same way about it, and Caruso generally ordered for twelve. Those of his party were Lucrezi Bori, Toscanini, Mr. and Mrs. Amato, Scognamigilio, his accompanist, Segurola, Scotti, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Reiss, Mr. and Mrs. Pini-Corsi.

Breakfast with the stars always was a slender meal. For the most part coffee and rools and grape fruit sufficed. Lunch, too, was rather light. It was at dinner that the artistic creations of Monsieur Gancel were served.

Monday, Caruso's lunch order was merely cold lamb; Tuesday, chicken boiled in rice; Thursday, fried eggs, boiled lamb, asparagus tips, blue fish, tomato salad; Saturday, Neapolitan sphagetti, bluefish, lettuce and tomatoes, souffle potatoes.

Wonderful Spaghetti!

The spaghetti of Saturday's lunch was a wonderful dish, mixed and tenderly watched by the great tenor himself. Before the applause of multitudes, before anything, Caruso prefers spaghetti. But it must be just right. It must be prepared by the hand of an artist, and of one who knows.

It must be confessed that Caruso had some trouble about the spaghetti before he mixed it himself. Something about the spaghetti that he was served in restaurants around Atlanta was not au fait. Something there was, just a suspicion sometimes, too much or too little. His palate detected always the trouble.

So Saturday afternoon he called for ten pounds of the finest spaghetti, imported from his own Italy. He called for the tomato and garlic sauce that is made in New York alone. He called for Parmesan cheese, and with them all in hand, he doffed his coat, rolled up his sleeves, and instructed the awed cooks something of the savoir faire of spaghetti making.

Kaiser's Daughter To Visit America

Princess Louise Will Sail in Fall After Her Marriage to Prince of Cumberland.

BERLIN, April 28.—Princess Victoria Louise, the Kaiser's only daughter, who will be married to Prince Ernest of Cumberland May 24, will visit the United States in the fall. Provisional bookings for the royal couple on the Imperator, leaving Hamburg September 1, have been made.

The extent of the Princess' travels has been confined to going about Europe with her imperial father. She is known to be extremely anxious to visit New York, about which she has heard such glowing tales from her American friends, especially Miss Nancy Leishman, daughter of the American Ambassador here, who is about to become a bride herself.

Extra! Extra! TY COBB Has Signed

BY JAMES J. MONTAGUE.

I met a U. S. Supreme Judge careering down the street,
His brow was wet with frenzied sweat, his wrapper clogged his feet
And when I asked him why the pave his steps so briskly spruned
And if the High Tribunal that he sits on had adjourned,
He answered with a snarl that spoke a peevish frame of mind,
"Is this the truth, or some fool joke? They say Ty Cobb has signed!"

I saw a railroad president release a strangle hold
Upon a certain chance to make a million dollars cold;
And hurry forth to seize the tape, which eagerly he scanned,
As yards on snaky yards of it went flying through his hand;
And as I passed behind his back I plainly heard him say,
"I do not care what happens now, if Ty Cobb signed to-day!"

I heard a high-browed scientist declare in accents firm,
"I think that I have nearly nailed a new and deadly germ,
I saw him wriggling sullenly beneath my microscope
But I will never get him now. Farewell to THAT fond hope!
On unimportant things to-day I cannot fix my mind,
I've got to go right out and learn if Tyrus Cobb has signed."

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK

"BUTTERFLY ON THE WHEEL."

The second week of the summer stock season inaugurated at the Atlanta Theater by the Miss Billy Long company will begin this evening, when "A Butterfly on the Wheel" will be presented for the first time in Atlanta. The company made a very favorable impression upon theatergoers last week, when "Wildfire" was offered. A complete production of "A Butterfly on the Wheel" is promised. This play made a great hit when it was presented in New York. Matinees will be given Wednesday and Saturday.

VAUDEVILLE AT THE FORSYTH.

Now that the Grand has been closed for the season, the Forsyth Theater reopens with a matinee this afternoon, when regular Keith vaudeville will be the bill. The Forsyth is admirably suited for warm weather attractions.

Sophye Barnard, Lou Anger & Co., in a one-act musical play, "The Song of the Heart;" Chris Richards, the English comedian and dancer; Bud and Nellie Heim, Gaby, the artistic pose artist; Misses Muriel and Francis, "Just Two Girls;" Honors and LaPrince French gymnasts, and Burr and Hope, in a novelty playlet, make up the bill.

"BILLY THE KID" AT THE LYRIC.

"Billy the Kid," a melodrama with all of its scenes laid in the far West, will be the attraction all week at the Lyric. The company is said to be a good one, Berkeley Haswell appearing in the title role. The play is full of interesting characters and dramatic scenes. Matinees to-morrow, Thursday and Saturday.

FAMILY VAUDEVILLE AT BIJOU.

Beginning with matinee this afternoon, the Bijou Theater will offer a program of family vaudeville and motion pictures all this week. Matinees every day.

The Difference.

"Papa, what is a conflagration?"

"It is a big fire, my son."

"What do they call a little fire?"

"There is no special name for a little fire. Oh, they sometimes call it an incipient fire and—let's see—well, it is sometimes called an inconsiderable fire. Why?"

"Well, I see your coat-tail is on fire, and I was wondering whether it was a conflagration or an incipient fire."

In a few minutes the young man had reason to think it was a conflagration.

ROUND-ABOUT-TOWN STORIES

All a Loan; And He Got Left.

Two men met on Whitehall Street. A handshake and the following conversation:

"Hello, Bill."

"Hello, John."

"Say, can you let me have $10 for a week, old man?"

"Sure, but where's the weak, old man?"

"Little Rhody" Is a Straggler.

While waiting for a jury to make a verdict in the Superior Court, some of the lawyers killed time telling stories and commenting on things political. Said one:

"Rhode Island insists on maintaining her position as straggler in the reform procession. The habit of more than a century remains unbroken.

"Rhode Island was thirteenth of the thirteen States to ratify the Federal Constitution. By one vote removed from a tie the instrument was accepted two years and a half after Delaware had acted.

"Rhode Island was last of the States to establish manhood suffrage.

"Rhode Island was one of four States to reject the proposed income tax amendment which recently became a part of the Constitution without her approval.

"And lately, when Rhode Island was expected to be the thirty-sixth State to vote in favor of the amendment for direct election of United States Senators, Connecticut beat her to it.

"Whatever meritorious reform is suggested, reserve a place at the tail for 'Little Rhody.'"

Way of All Dreams; Too Good To Be True.

Here's a story that a reporter for one of the Atlanta papers told the other day:

"The cub reporter dreamed a beautiful dream. He had scored a 'beat' on the biggest piece of news in a year, and his story, just as he had written it, decorated the entire first page of the paper, with a seven-column head in two-inch type. The publisher sent for him.

"'That was a crackerjack story you had in this morning's paper,' said the general manager.

"'I thank you,' the cub replied with becoming modesty. 'That is praise from Sir Hubert.'

"'And who, if I may ask, is Sir Hubert?'

"'Sir Hubert,' replied the cub, 'was the guy that put the raise in praise.'

"And just as the general manager was about to inform him that his pay henceforth would be $75 a week the cub woke up."

Guard King Alfonso Against Anarchists

Feared Attempt Will Be Made to Assassinate Ruler on Trip to Paris.

MADRID, April 28.—Squads of secret service agents left to-day for Perpigran and other points on the Franco-Spanish frontier to search for anarchists in connection with the trip King Alfonso contemplated to Paris. Following the attempted assassination of Alfonso recently, the authorities learned anarchists were plotting to kill the king on his trip to Paris. France is co-operating in the precautionary measures.

COUSIN OF POINCARE TO TEACH AT PRINCETON

PRINCTTON, N. J., April 28.—Princeton's mathematical department will be strengthened next year by the addition to it of Prof. Pierre Boutroux of Poitiers, France, who has cabled President Hibben his acceptance of the place.

Prof. Boutroux is a cousin of President Poincare and a son of Emile Boutroux, professor of philosophy and director of the Foundation Thiers in Paris.

Prep League News and Notes.

Here is the standing of the teams in the interclass baseball tournament at Emory College:

	W.	L.	P.C.
Freshmen	4	1	.800
Sophomores	3	1	.750
Seniors	2	2	.500
Juniors	0	5	.000

It is to be regretted that the Locust Grove Institute baseball team this year is not entered in the G. I. A. A. L. G. I. has one of the best nines in the history of the school and would make the prep race interesting for Riverside, who appears to be having rather an easy time of it this year.

The students of G. M. C. held a nightshirt parade at Milledgeville last Friday night in celebration of its victory over Gordon. The score was 6 to 2. Both pitchers struck out nine men.

The annual interclass track meet of Emory College will be held this afternoon on Weber athletic field. A pennant is offered to the winning class team. Last year the senior class won this meet and they appear to be the strongest of the teams again this season.

The interclass track meet at Emory College is a preliminary affair for the dual meet between Emory and Mercer on May 10 at Macon.

For the distance runs G. M. A. has Davis, Allen and Selig this year. Hagan and Tribble are working hard for the pole vault. The loss of Hardeman and Hurlong has been a severe blow to the track squad this season, but the coach is working overtime with the other athletes in the hope of developing some new men to fill their shoes.

The annual tennis tournament at G. M. A. started last week. There are about twenty-five entries in this event. Two Gold Medal rackets have been offered to the winners. The finals and semi-finals of this tournament will probably be played off to-day.

The interclass baseball race at Emory College is rapidly nearing a close. The Freshmen and Sophomores are leading the bunch. The Juniors are hopelessly out of the running. They have lost all five games played. The Freshmen are at the top of the percentage column.

Weaver, outfielder on the Boys High team, got a perfect average in both fielding and batting in the last game with G. M. A. Weaver knocked out three safeties and accepted all chances in the field without an error.

Tech and Boys High schools cleared about $200 in the track meet held at Tech last Friday. The athletes at Boys High have announced that they will not enter in the annual prep meet on May 9 unless the faculty decides to give sweaters with the official school letter to all men who have made places on the track team.

Boys High has arranged to send a track team to Gainesville on May 17 to compete against Riverside Academy.

Fowler, of Marist, looks like a sure winner in the hammer throw in the prep athletic meet this year. He has been covering nearly a hundred feet in many of his practice throws. In the meet between Tech High and Boys High last Friday, the best mark made was 93 feet, which is considerably less than the throws Fowler is making.

Dan Carey, superintendent of the public parks of this city, has arranged for thirty baseball diamonds to be at the disposal of amatuer teams. This is a great advance over last year, when the boys had only thirteen fields to play ball on.

Sam Armistead, manager of the Boys High track team, is trying to arrange a track meet with Stone Mountain, to take place some time next month. The Mountaineers have a fine team this year, but the Boys High athletes, confident of their ability after the defeat of Tech High last Friday, are willing to take a chance with any of them.

Peacock will hold a tennis tournament with Boys High soon. There are some classy tennis players at Peacock, and the school should be able to turn out a team that could put it over any of the Prep Leaguers. Sims, Sams and Black are the three leaders in this sport at Peacock.

TITLE HOLDER TO GO EAST.

BERKELEY, CAL., April 28.—Ten athletes from the University of California will enter the track and field meet to be held in Harvard stadium May 31. California under-graduates Saturday subscribed $1,500 to send the team East. Among those sure of a place on the team is Earl Shattuck, holder of the new world's intercollegiate record of 175 feet 10 inches in the hammer throw.

MILLERS DROP WADDELL.

MINNEAPOLIS, April 21.—"Rube" Waddell, once the greatest southpaw twirler in the big leagues, to-day was transferred to the Minneapolis team, in the Northern League, a class C organization. "Rube" is recovering from a severe attack of pleurisy, and it is feared his days of usefulness on a ball field are over.

FOOD FOR SPORT FANS

By GEORGE E. PHAIR.

THE HASBEEN.

A pug there was and he hit the slide
(Even as you and I),
But he batted on though his youth had died
And his limbs were heavy and ossified.
And he cast his challenges far and wide
(Even as you and I).

Oh, the bunk he springs and the junk he springs
As he travels about the land!
And all men know that he hasn't a show
Though he blows like a German band.
But, being a fighter, he never will know
And he never will understand.

A. Wolgast arises to remark that he will come back, demonstrating that boxing is an incurable disease.

It is hard to understand Wolgast's defeat, inasmuch as Nat Goodwin did not bet on him, nor did James J. Corbett pick him to win.

Tom Jones was the heaviest sufferer when Mr. Wolgast met his demise. Every time Mr. Murphy turned loose a wallop he punched a hole in Mr. Jones' meal ticket.

The Australian athlete who swung a pair of Indian clubs for 108 hours demonstrated that some men have a lot of time to spare.

A new hammer recor dhas been established in California, but it will be eclipsed when Cincinnati fans warm up to their work.

WHERE?

Where are the Sox of yesteryear
Who won without a hit?
The Sox who swung with feeble bats,
But got away with it.

They lean against the pill to-day
And murder it for fair,
But when they get around to third
They always perish there.

The Tigers have demonstrated that they can whip the Browns without the aid of Ty Cobb, but it may be different when they meet a major league club.

A midsummer ski tournament on a greased slide may be an absorbing event, but it is about as appropriate as indoor mountain climbing.

A glance at the National League standings reveals the fact that the Boston athletes have attained their midseason form.

I WONDER WHY.

The sunlight falls on glade and glen
And fills the fruitful valleys.
And still we see a lot of men
Who sweat on bowling alleys.

We are not surprised to learn that Germany bets $400,000,000 a year on horse races. Tom Jones bets more than that in a day when he is in good voice.

All Charlie Ebbets needs to make his $1,000,000 layout complete is a baseball team.

Technically speaking, Hoke Smith is in favor of a downward revision of baseball magnates.

LAUGH, GOL DARN YE, LAUGH!

It is easy enough to be pleasant
When many a hit is slammed,
But the man worth while
Is the man who can smile
When he whiffs with the bases jammed.

Birmingham Country Club Plans Tourney

All members of Atlanta golf clubs have just been invited to the invitation tournament of the Birmingham Country Club, which has been set for May 8, 9 and 10.

The prizes which will be offered include five flight cups, cup for low qualifying score, cup for winning team of four, markers for individual members of winning team, five runner-up cups, and two cups for net scores in handicap event. The program follows:

Thursday, May 8, Morning—Qualifying round, 18 holes, medal play. Sixteen lowest scores qualify for Lakeview prize. Second 16 qualify for Red Mountain prize. Third 16 qualify for Highland Avenue prize. Fourth 16 qualify for Highball prize. Fifth 16 qualify for Jones Valley prize.

Friday Morning—First round for all flights. Losing eight to be paired for junior prizes.

Friday Evening—Second round senior and first round junior flights.

Saturday Morning—Semi-finals for all flights. Handicap event. Finalists not eligible.

Saturday Afternoon—Finals for all flights.

Saturday, 8 P. M.—Presentation of prizes, followed by a dinner dance.

The club team will be determined by the aggregate scores of the four members of each team in the qualifying ruond. Teams must be nominated before starting.

All matches to be 18 holes.

There will be no banquet.

Rules of the Western Golf Association will govern, subject to such local ground rules as the tournament committee may adopt.

Players may match themselves for qualifying round, provided they do not select club mates. The committee will pair all players who have not reported pairings to them by Wednesday, May 7, and players are requested to send in their entries by that time to the secretary of the Country Club.

Pairings and time of starting will be published in the morning paper, and each couple must be ready to start when their names are called.

KLAUS TO MEET WINNER OF MOHA-DILLON FIGHT

MILWAUKEE, WIS., April 28.—Frank Klaus is to meet the winner of the Jack Dillon-Bob Moha battle in this city on May 30, according to the announcement of the promoters of to-night's clash when Moha will attempt to stop the Indianapolis middleweight.

The announcement has thrown a circle of determination over the home lad and he vows that he will put his opponent away or himself be lifted from the mat in an unconscious condition. "I want Klaus and I'll get the match if I have to break a hand in my endeavor to score a knockout," said Moha yesterday as he finished his training.

HANK O'DAY TO SIGN AS NATIONAL LEAGUE UMPIRE

CHICAGO, Ill., April 28.—Hank O'Day, last year manager of the Cincinnati National League baseball team, is about to sign a contract to umpire in the organization in which he has been pitcher, umpire and manager. Announcement to this effect was made here yesterday on good authority.

It was stated that O'Day had tried to obtain a place on the American League umpiring staff, but that the National League refused to "waive" on his services.

REDS GET TWO PLAYERS.

CHICAGO, Ill., April 28.—Pitcher William Powell and Infielder Michael Berghammer were sold yesterday to the Cincinnati Nationals by the Chicago Nationals. It is understood Cincinnati claimed the two players at the waiver price.

M'CARTY READY TO DO BATTLE WITH WILLARD

By Ed. W. Smith.

CHICAGO, April 28.—Nothing could be plainer in the world than Luther McCarty's position regarding a match with Jess Willard, the elongated Kansan, who has been camping on the McCarty-McCarney heels for a long time now. In a letter here McCarney, the managerial brains of the confederacy, makes the flat statement that Jess can have the match, and gladly as far as McCarty is concerned, as soon as some promoter offers a purse of reasonable size for the affair. "We never have received a single definite offer of a match with Willard and therefore never could accept or reject him," McCarney says. "This is the straight dope on Willard."

* * *

MANY of the critics have been giving McCarney a touch of high life and making his burden the harder to carry by accusing him of sidestepping the big man from Kansas. McCarty has been accused of dodging Willard because of the ten-round bout in New York between the pair, the opinion being after that was over that Willard had had the shade. But it appears now that McCarty would be only too willing to get the chance to wipe out that stain and give Willard the chance of putting a black mark on the McCarty record. But if McCarty's statement is truthful, and there isn't a reason on earth to think otherwise, nobody has bid seriously for such a meeting. Can it be that it will need a lot of Tom Jones' very best brand of arguments to wake up the men who make the bids and get some sort of a tangible offer for this meeting.

* * *

PROBABLY Jones has had too much on his mind in attending to the wants of Ad Wolgast in Saturday's battle with Tommy Murphy to pay much attention to stirring up any trouble for Willard. At any rate Willard has had a bad nose, having gone through an operation recently, and couldn't do battle for some time anyway. But now that McCarty's manager has made a definite stand in the matter we may expect to see the giants hooked up before very long in an encounter that should settle the question. Many consider Jess the only real contender for McCarty's lily white title.

TWO ATHLETES IN HOSPITAL.

COLUMBIA, MO., April 28.—J. R. Chapman, mile runner on the University of Missouri track team, is suffering with appendicitis. He was taken to Kansas City yesterday and an operation will be performed there. His home is in Shelbina. Finley, Missouri's other dependable miler, also is sick. He has been in the hospital several days with tonsilitis.

NEW YORK, April 28.—Vivan Nickalls, the great Tnglish rowing coach, who arrived here yesterday on the Oceanic, is going to Detroit, Mich., to teach rowing there.

Crackers After Flag This Season
Directors Will Spare No Expense
Williams to Play Short To-Day

By Percy H. Whiting.

"WE'RE out in front. We're going to stay there if money will do it." So says Charles Nunnally, director of the baseball association. "We have bought a short stop. If he does not fill the bill we will buy another. Our pitchers are uncertain. If we find we need other pitchers we shall buy them. This city deserves a pennant winning ball club this year and we are going to give it one if buying ball players will turn the trick.

* * *

THE local association is tickled pink with the showing thus far—both on the diamond and in the box office. The team has been winning ball games and the fans have been turning out as never before. If the local team had had good weather for opening day and Memorial Day it would have shown attendance records that would have been strictly big league.

* * *

THE baseball association recognized the need for a new short stop just as quickly as the fans did—and they have a new one ready for a try-out to-day. If he does not work, well, still another will be bought.

If the new man, Williams, comes through there is only one source of worry—the slab department.

An odd thing about the team is that the catching department, that looked as though it were going to be weak, has proved strong. Pat Graham has converted us all and has demonstrated class that makes him look the best young catcher in the league. And Joe Dunn, supposed to be ready for the punk pile, has turned up as chipper as a cricket and is playing good ball. Both Dunn and Graham are hitting above their stride and their throwing to second has been most amazing.

* * *

BUT those pitchers! Just when everybody was willing to admit that Bill Smith had a wonderful staff, what happened? Why, the whole boiling developed sore arms—or all at least except Gilbert Price and we expect to get a report on him this afternoon.

Old Buck Weaver, the Hurling Hottentot, suddenly springs a muscular blow-out. "Diamond Jim" Brady, generally as reliable as Old Faithful, gets a kink in his whip. Paul Musser springs a streak of hurling hysteria. Buck Becker loses everything in the way of curves. And old George Bausewein combines a sprained ankle with a lack of stamina.

Gilbert Price is the one man in the lot who is effective. And of course Gilbert, willing cuss that he is, can't pitch every game.

* * *

BILL SMITH has a worry coming to him. He must decide right quick whether his pitchers are just temporarily incapacitated or whether they are all through. It is incredible that the whole bunch suddenly went wrong at once—to stay wrong all the season. Evidently Smith believes that the thing will not last. He has picked Becker as one man not likely to come around this season. And Becker will go. Weaver has Smith guessing. This man has pitched three bad games in a row—and he is the one who was counted on to be the star pitcher of the Cracker squad this season. It is reasonable to suppose that Weaver will come around all right. But it is high time he was showing symptoms. Musser will be all right after a bit and Brady will improve as the weather warms up.

Bausewein is the man whose fate must be decided first. Owing to his sprained ankle he has had the least chance to show Manager Smith his wares. And because he was almost an unknown when he reported here he is the very one who should have had the most opportunities to show his stuff.

* * *

THE big leagues are pitching their excess hurlers overboard in shoals these days. Men who can win in the Southern are on the market every day.

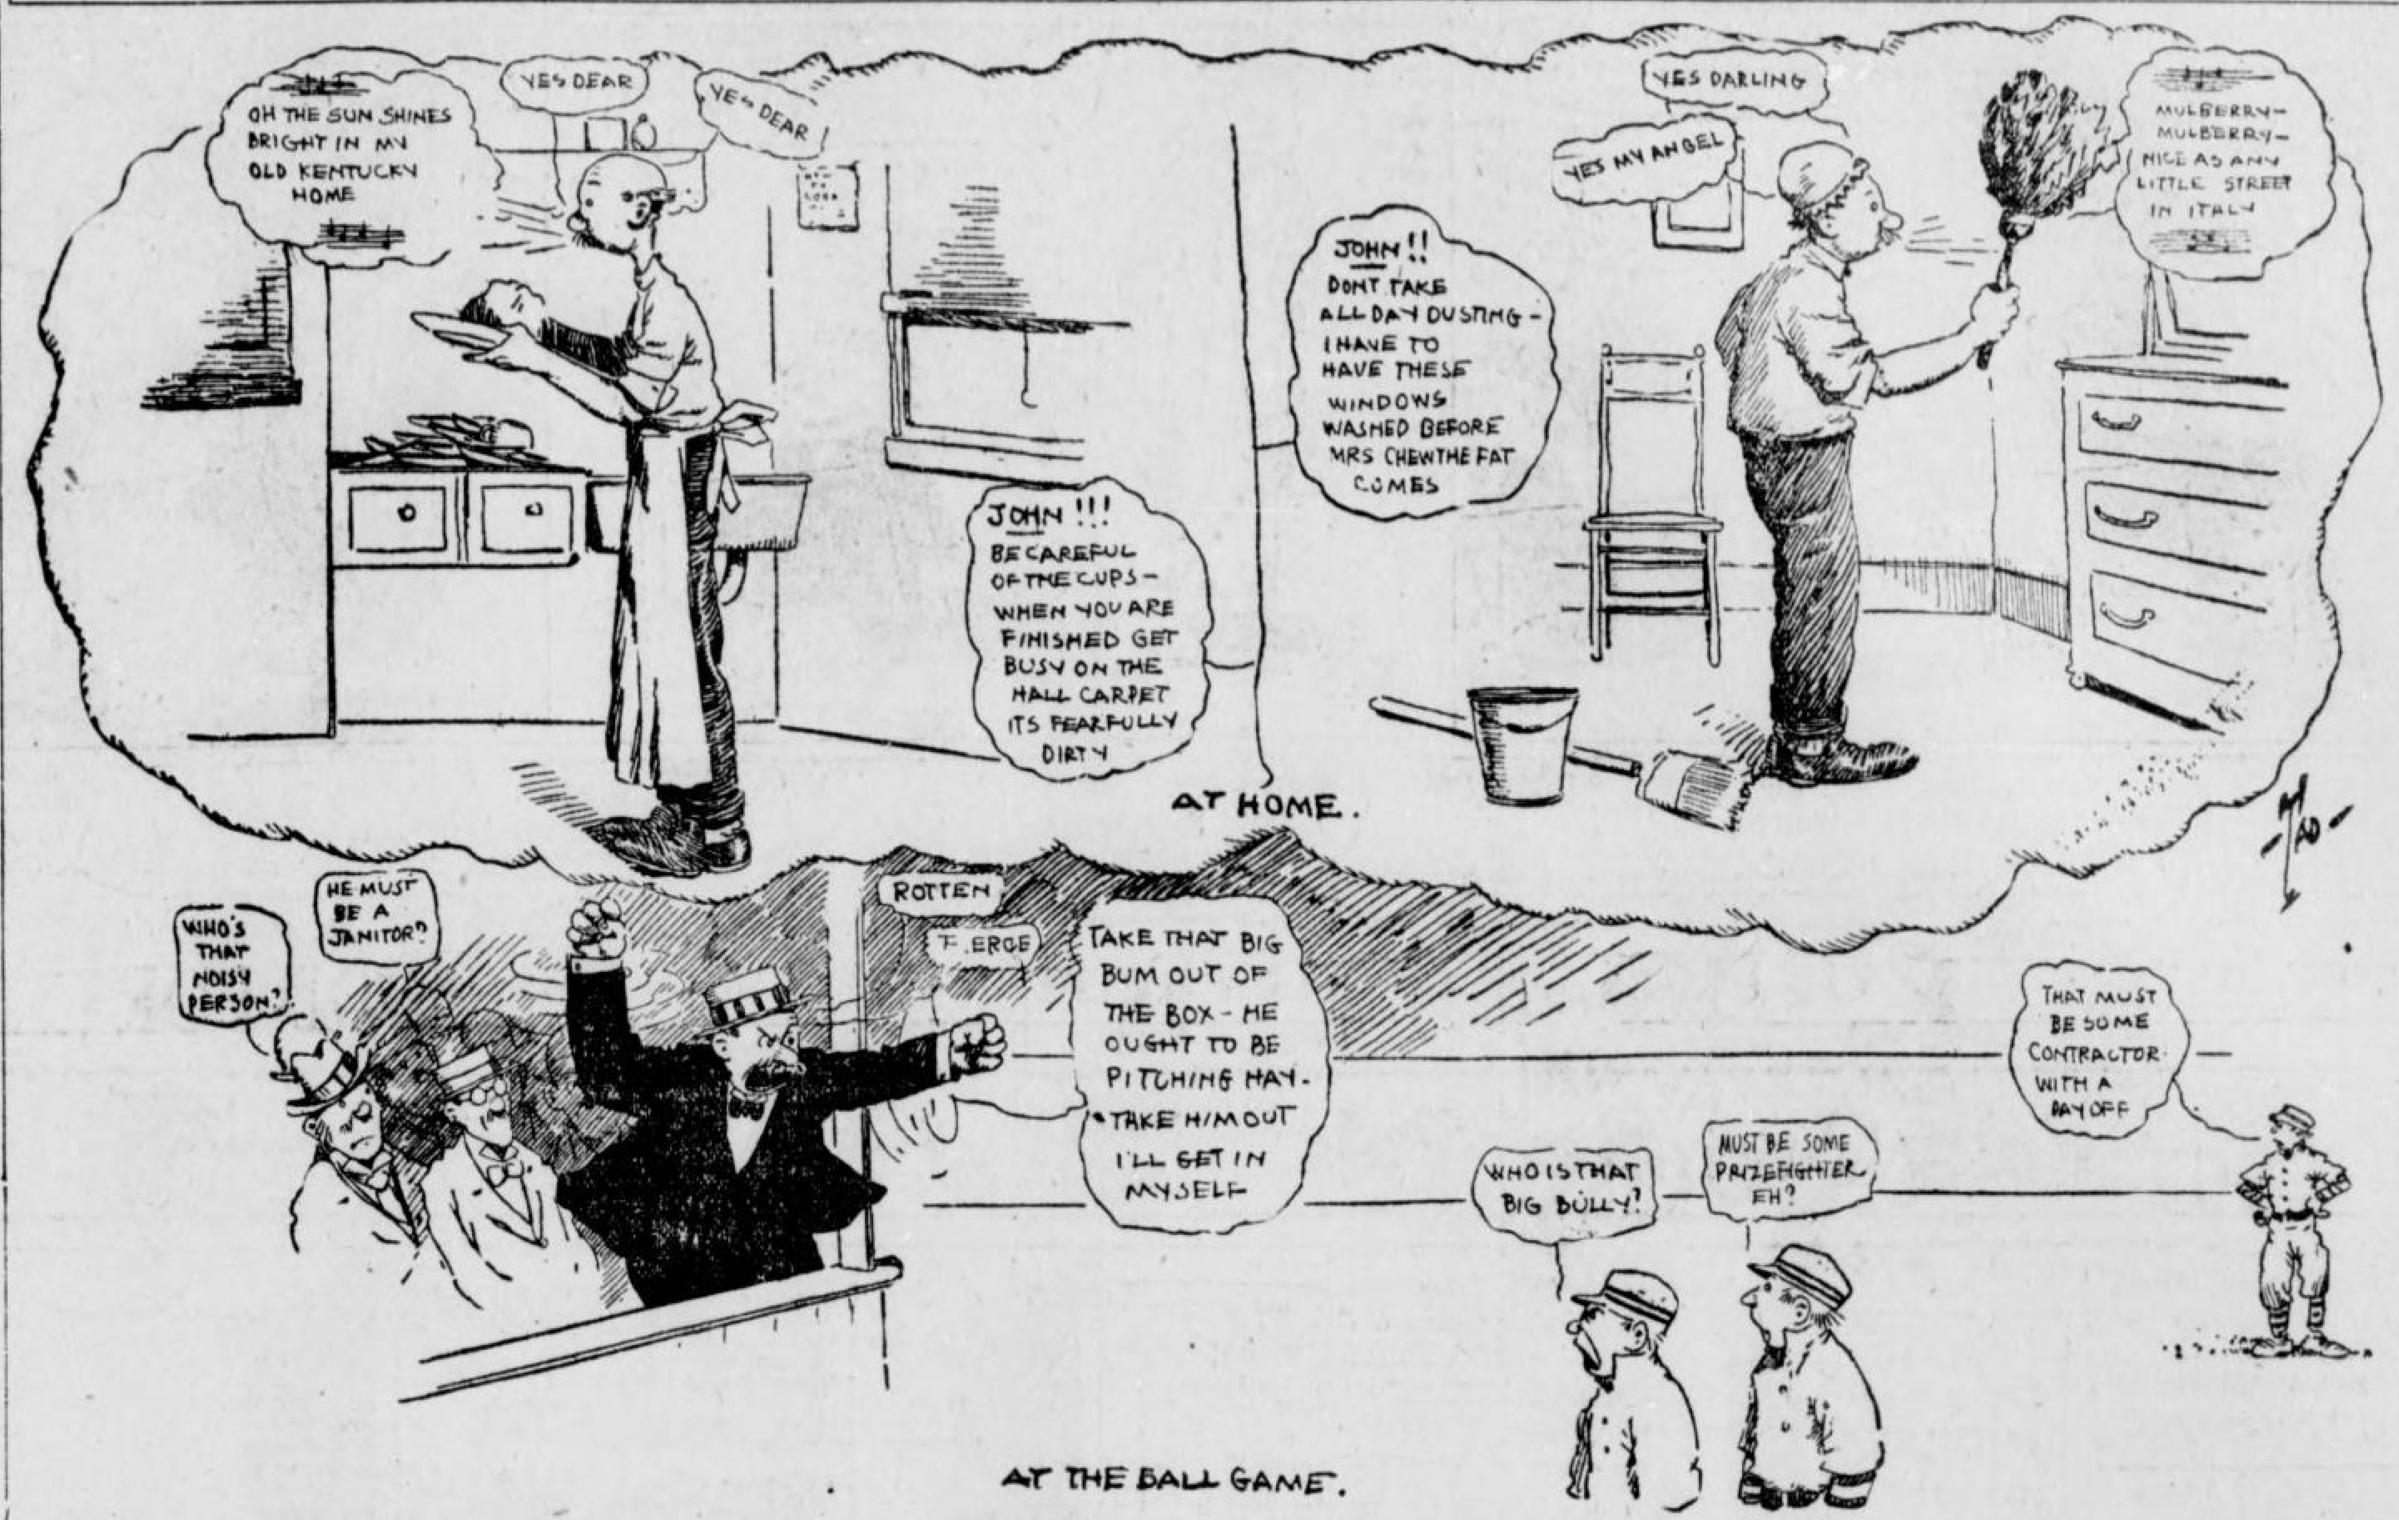

It has been demonstrated to the local association that their receipts for a day or two while the club is winning, will buy the best pitcher turned loose this season. They will buy if Smith nods his head.

* * *

FILL that gap at short, as Williams is likely to fill it, and give the pitching staff just a shade more strength and the pennant is a pipe. Smith does not need his usual hurling strength. He has such a team of sluggers that if the pitchers hurl even moderately good ball the Crackers will win.

The chief point of it all is that everybody is set for a pennant. And especially is the local association determined to land one and it is willing to shoot the whole contents of its pocketbook in the direction of the big league club which offers a winner—and durn the price!

"MOLEY" HINTS CRACKERS ARE NOT TOO BRAINY

NASHVILLE, TENN., April 28.—"One of the most unwise things any manager can do is to make a prediction of a pennant winner or where his own club will finish in the league race until he has carefully compared all the teams in that league with his own club," said Manager Molesworth, of the Barons, in discussing the practice so freely indulged in this and other leagues of forecasting the result at the finish.

"You see what I got into over in Atlanta and it all came of my effort to kid a young reporter. I was going through the gate at Ponce De Leon Park, when this boy grabbed me and asked me what I thought of Billy Smith's team. I was in a hurry and I thought the quickest way to get rid of him was to tell him that Atlanta had the best club I had ever seen in this league and ought to walk off with the pennant.

Admit They Can Hit.

"I will say that Atlanta has the hardest hitting bunch that we have faced yet but in speed and brains, which go a mighty long ways toward winning baseball games and thereby pennants, there are several clubs that are equal to Atlanta and a few who are far ahead of them. Take Birmingham for instance. It's true we have not been hitting anyways near like Atlanta but I do not believe that there is a club in this league who has it on us in gray matter.

"None of my pitchers are right, but when they do get into condition you can look out for us. Boyd, who last year was one of the most dependable men I had, hasn't thrown a ball this season but when he rounds to I expect him to prove the leading pitcher of this league.

Foxen Is Getting Right.

"Foxen is just now getting into shape, while Hardgrove is troubled with a sore arm.

"What I need more than anything else right now is one more good hard hitter and I hope to be able to land a man I am after in a few days. When I get more hitting strength on the club I will be able to give anybody a fight."

KLING SIGNS CONTRACT; HAS RELEASE CLAUSE

CINCINNATI, April 21.—Reports came from Kansas City last night that Johnny Kling, the baseball catcher, had signed a contract to catch for the Cincinnati team during this season. It is stated, however, that there is a provision in the signed contract which gives Kling his unconditional release at the end of the present season.

As yet the contract has not reached President August Herrmann, of the local baseball club. The latter would not comment on the unconditional release provision to-day, saying that as he had not received such a contract he did not think it wise to say whether or not he would sign it until he knew the exact wording of it.

TECH AND WAKE FOREST MEET ON DIAMOND TO-DAY

The Tech Yellow Jackets will play their first home game in three weeks this afternoon.

The Wake Forest College team will be their opponents on Grant Field, the contest starting promptly at 3:30 o'clock.

GEORGIA CLASHES WITH VANDERBILT TO-MORROW

ATHENS, GA., April 28.—The University of Georgia baseball team has mapped out a strenuous schedule this season.

The team is just back from a week's road trip through the West and, with a rest to-day, will get into action again.

The Vanderbilt Commodores come for games to-morrow and Wednesday.

These games will have a direct bearing on the Southern college title. Vanderbilt has been mopping up in her section just as Georgia has down here, and the results of the games will do much toward deciding who will fly the college bunting.

Friday and Saturday the University of Tennessee will be here.

SEWANEE BASEBALL NINE HAS BUSY WEEK AHEAD

The Sewanee baseball team has a long road jaunt on. Friday and Saturday they played the University of Tennessee in Knoxville.

To-day and Tuesday the Mercer University team will be played at Macon, a double-header being scheduled for Tuesday.

Jumping to Gainesville, Fla., the University of Florida will be played Wednesday and Thursday, with two games on tap for the first-named date.

Friday and Saturday the Georgia Tech Yellow Jackets will be their opponents at Grant Field, in Atlanta, a double-header being scheduled for Saturday afternoon.

TOM BURNS NOW FIGHT PROMOTER

Boxer-Manager Announces Three Championship Matches at Calgary During Coming Summer.

By W. W. Naughton.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 28.—Fight promoters beware. Tommy Burns is about to enter the field as a maker of matches, and if his plans thrive, Calgary will become the hub of the boxing universe.

Nor does Tommy intend to emulate the timid, tentative wights who, in order to protect themselves, begin any new line of business "in a small way."

Tommy is ambitious and self-reliant at the outset. He has announced that he intends pulling off three world championships in different classes this summer, and any one cognizant of the trials and tribulations that attach to conducting pugilistic enterprises knows there is nothing small about that.

The weight divisions in which Tommy aims to develop blue ribbon men are the welter, middle and heavyweights. According to the entries so far, the various competitions will be notable "free for all." Here and there appears the name of a man who has made a bit of a mark in the fighting game, but taken by and large Tommy's championship candidate roster reads like a newspaper list of applicants for marriage licenses.

In the heavyweight department Tommy is pinning great faith to Arthur Pelkey, who he thinks with intelligent treatment can be fashioned into a world's champion. Burns boxed Pelkey recently and found much in him to admire.

Right here is where Burns has the bulge on the average promoter. If he has doubts as to a white hope's ability he can fight the gentleman and find out all about it.

IN a recent issue of The Sidney Referee there appeared the startling caption: "Sam Langford a Human Man."

The story beneath is a short one and it does not take the reader long to disabuse his mind of any suspicion that Langford is claiming to be a member of the Caucasian race.

It seems that during the voyage of the steamer Wyreema from Sydney to Brisbane a stowaway was discovered. Having no money, the unfortunate man was doomed to confinement until an opportunity should occur for handing him over to the shore authorities, when Langford came to the rescue.

Sam paid the price of a second-class passage for the man—a matter of $8 or $9, and immediately put himself in solid with those on board.

A fellow passenger wrote The Referee about it. He said Sam's act of charity was performed so quickly and unostentatiously—without "putting it to music," as the Australians say—that the Wyreema travelers with one accord proclaimed Langford a "human man."

FOUR BASEBALL LEAGUES OPEN SEASON WEDNESDAY

The New York State League, the Central Association, the Tri-State League and the New England League will open their playing seasons on Wednesday.

This will leave only a few scattering leagues which have not opened their seasons as yet.

The Georgia-Alabama League will open its season May 5, the Southern Michigan and the Ohio State May 7, and the Empire State May 12.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON'S BIG LEAGUE GOSSIP

NEW YORK, April 28.—Investigations having spread over the country like the prickly heat or eczema within the last few years, there is now some talk of the legislators looking into the so-called baseball trust that prevents a player from signing with another club if he is dissatisfied with the conditions of the team to which he belongs. This whole question hinges on the reserve clause, an instrument that has been termed unjust by many baseball authorities.

So far as I can see, such an investigation would not benefit the players, because it would tend to destroy the interest in baseball. The purpose of the reserve clause is to keep a man from jumping from one team to another that offers him more money, which jumping would tend to destroy the present enthusiasm over baseball. Once the interest and gate receipts are gone, the player is bound to lose out. If a man could force his club to release him to the team willing to pay the salary he demanded, the game would revert to the situation which prevailed in the old war times. All the largest cities where baseball was in the most prosperous state would possess the stars of the game, and the little towns would be wiped out as pennant contenders.

WHETHER or not the reserve clause is unjust depends upon the use to which the owner puts it. Many magnates try to crowd a man out of the business if he refuses to sign with their club, but, when a player becomes a stubborn holdout, there is generally a tendency toward arbitration, and the powerful men in the league bring their influence to bear, particularly if the man in question is a star, as he usually is. It strikes me that a solution of the question would be to have a board of arbitration appointed on which were both players and club owners in equal numbers. Whenever a player became dissatisfied with his salary or other conditions on the team, his case could be submitted to this board, and both sides would be forced to agree to the verdict.

As for the case of Cobb, the one which has stirred up all the talk, I am not familiar enough with the details to express an opinion, but it strikes me that a man of Cobb's drawing ability is worth a lot of money to his club. The sting could be taken out of the reserve clause by establishing some neutral body to adjust all arguments.

OFTEN followers of baseball have asked me if a pitcher does not feel discouraged when he is knocked out of the box in a game.

"I shouldn't think you would ever want to go back to the box again," a fan said to me once.

Doesn't most every man have a bad day at business when nothing breaks right for him? Don't most actresses have bad days when they are out of voice? It is the same way with a ball player. We all have our off days. As George Ade once said, "not even a humorist can go to the bat every day and bang out a three-bagger." It is this fear of going back into the box which harms so many young pitchers, but it does not bother veterans.

* * *

I RECALL a game I started in Pittsburg last season. The Pirates had a habit at that time of hitting the first ball, and McGraw warned me to watch out for this before I went into the box.

"'Look out for that first one, Matty," he said to me.

I went into the box with this in mind. Byrne was the first man up to the bat, and he crowds the plate. I tried to waste a ball on the inside, and he stepped back and singled. Because they were playing a rushing game, I figured he would try to steal, so I attempted to waste one on the next batter. Bang! There was another base hit. With two on, I was looking for a bunt and threw the ball at the next batter's head, because a high one is the most difficult to lay down. He kissed it for another base hit, and the Pittsburg team had three runs before the inning was over.

"Better let some one else finish the game," said I to McGraw when the club went to the bench. "They're hitting wild pitches to-day."

"You're putting them over too good," answered McGraw.

I didn't go back to the clubhouse that night feeling I couldn't pitch any more. It was not my day, and that was all. This is the way most veterans regard being knocked out of the box. Only the youngsters lose their confidence.

Jim Flynn apparently doesn't mind a little thing like a beating at the hands of Luther McCarty. He is now hot after a ten-round battle with Gunboat Smith, and would like to pull it off in New York. The metropolis certainly has to stand for a lot of coarse work in the pugilistic line.

GOLF LUGGAGE IS COMMON SIGHT

Players No Longer Ashamed to Carry Bags of Queer Shaped Clubs Through Streets.

By "Chick" Evans.

ONE of the commonest sights of early spring just now on the downtown streets is the man with his golf bag. Time was when the golfer felt uncomfortable at the very thought of being seen carrying his clubs through the crowded Atlanta streets. During those days of the first introduction of golf it was an object of much ridicule and a target for every would-be wit who happened to be acquainted with the game, and his name was legion. There was something in the necessary costume, the peculiar shape of the clubs and their more peculiar names that appealed strongly to the multitude's sense of humor. In those days office boys and caddies were hired to carry the clubs to the railway stations, while the owner slipped in a little later unincumbered by mirth-inspiring luggage. All of that is now changed. The semingly uncouth nomenclature has been transferred into houshold words and the corners of almost every office hold a bag of clubs.

Now the golfer himself sallies forth laden with the heaviest of bags, and he is proud, conscious of the fact that he is an object of envy, not ridicule.

The check rooms of all the city clubs, notably the Atlanta Athletic, and all the railway stations are crowded with the paraphernalia of golf, for every man and his cousin goes golfing these days. There is everything to remind us of golf—even the well-worn golf bag used by the street vender of canes to hold his wares.

Heisman Suspends Four Tech Players

Moore, Pound, Donaldson and Montague Draw Lay-off for Indifferent Work Against Alabama.

As a result of indifferent playing in the game Saturday against Alabama at Tuscaloosa, four members of the Tech baseball team are enjoying an indefinite lay-off by request of Coach Heisman. The quartet consists of "Scrappy" Moore, third baseman; Murphy Pound, outfielder; Jack Donaldson, shortstop, and Edgar Montague, second baseman. A number of shifts were made necessary by this ruling, but Coach Heisman has the places pretty well filled.

LOOKOUTS PURCHASE NEW OUTFIELDER; STARK SOLD

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., April 28.—Outfielder Thrasher, formerly with Cleveland in the Appalachian League, will join the Chattanooga club at Birmingham to-day. He was at one time a member of the Memphis club. He led the Appalachian in hitting three seasons. He was bought from Columbus, Ohio.

Outfielder Gillespie, who has been in the hospital, also [illegible]joins the club to-day. Pitcher Stark has been sold to the New Britain Eastern Association club.

THE BAPTISM OF FIRE

To-day's Complete Short Story

IT had seemed to me at the time that I could do the thing in entire safety. Our troops were ordered out to take and destroy a village which lay in the valley by the riverside, and their operations would be confined to the lower ground. The heights above would be entirely untroubled, unoccupied.

And so I had gained these, after walking five miles over gentle slopes of short scrub grass, and then had lain me down on the ridge and watched the skirmishing, the attack, and the capture through a pair of glasses.

From a distance it had all seemed very tame. There were little puffs of gray smoke, men fell, others came on at run, zigzagging in and out in entire disorder, made their weapons and accoutrements glitter in the sun, and they disappeared under cover of the mud and bamboo village.

More smoke arose in puffs from the lanes between the houses. And then a stream of Black Flag Chinese began to pour out at the run, some of them pitched forward and lay still, and the others opened out to pass these by, and others limped and lagged behind the general pace; and quite irregular crackle from the village, like the burning of brush-wood, told me what was causing these things.

But when the Balck Flags were out of range and the firing ceased the valley dropped into dread quietude and there was nothing more to see. I yawned over it for another half-hour and then walked a dozen yards down the slope, smoked a couple of cigarettes and began my dejeuner. The regiment of Black Flags which came down upon me must have started climbing the hill face the very minute I quitted the ridge.

Ran Like a Dog.

Instinct, as I say, jerked me to my feet, and instinct must have given me a prodigious start, for when first my wits came to me I found myself running like a frightened dog.

It seemed as if ten million bullets whisked past me, and I had a notion I was hit in twenty places. But nothing clogged my legs, and although my heart was trying to jump clear of its moorings I ran on at a freshened pace. There wasn't a more terrified man in Asia that minute. The shots came dropping after me; shots and cries in barbarous Chinese, and the world swam in front.

Terror, undiluted, made me a running automaton.

Beyond a doubt the most cowardly Frenchman in the East that moment was myself. I did not attempt to controvert this fact; I ran on, cringing from every bullet that rustled past me or spurted up the ground beside my leaping feet; but I sought to find excuses for my conduct.

For good behavior they had raised me from the ranks to a non-commissioned officer.

How long I ran on in this blinded state I cannot tell; but a sharp sting of pain set my wits a-going. It felt like the sear of hot metal burning and frying, and the hurt came somewhere from the round of the left shoulder.

Instantly my mood woke again. For the first time there grew upon me a vague resentment against the crew who were yelping and firing in chase; and as I scurried on, and the ill-aimed bullets threw their rushing halo of sound around my head and limbs, this increased to a wild, poisonous hate.

Remembered My Revolver.

Then, for the first time, I remembered my revolver. With bungling fingers I unholstered it, and, turning, fired six rapid shots. One man clapped hands to his face, screamed shrilly like a child and pitched to the earth, his pigtail swung up in the air as thought it had been a black whiplash.

I was no longer a French gentleman then—I was a savage beast, lust ful to tear my enemies' throats.

I turned again and fired on. A whole fusillade of vengeful shots were exchanged in return, but none of them found a mark in me, and I laughed aloud in triumph. Whatever happened now I had killed my own weight of enemy.

But, as I say, I wanted desperately to do more, and now that the paralysis of terror and excitement had flashed away my mind was beginning to work with craft and cunning. Ahead of me and running athwart my course was a muddy wallow they called the road and which our troops had passed along barely three hours before to the capture of the village. To the left were the French lines and safety. In front, and a ball's throw beyond the road, was the yellow turbid stream of the river.

It was impossible to reach the camp even had I risked it. The Black Flags had anticipated the move and had detailed off a party to outflank me in that direction. By turning off to the right I might very well bring down the enemy upon our expeditionary force on their march back from the village. They might be prepared to receive them, and again they might not, and I would have died ten times sooner than any move of mine for my own safety should bring disaster on my comrades. Our branch of the service gets sneered at enough as it is.

Shots Thick and Fast.

So I raced on for the road and passed it, and labored down to the river. The shots came fast and thick now, and two more bullets galled me, but I waded through the shallows without further hurt and gained the deep, tawny river beyond.

A sampan was moored a hundred yards out and a little downstream. I made for it with long, bursting dives. There were half a dozen men on board, jumping, gesticulating, and crying warnings; and once, when I came up from an underwater swim, one of them let fly a match lock at me.

Another dive and I was upon them, and they received me with knife-stabs—and how the fight turned next I could not tell. But of a sudden, with a blink and a gasp and a downward blow I came by my wits again, and found that I was on board the sampan with a curved Chinese sword in my hand; and one man lay dead and bleeding at my feet, another was dead and floating face downwards with a current astern. And the rest were swimming to the shore, and twenty Black Flags were firing over their heads as fast as they could.

My pistol was gone and I could do no more on the offensive. The wish for fight had left me; the lust for life alone remained. I cut the painter and lay on the sampan's bottom, whilst she drifted down with the current into our own lines.

And yet my officers were pleased to call me brave, and the general gave me the war-medal. I tried to refuse it, but they laughed at me. A vedette (it seemed) had watched me through a glass from the moment of the first shot being fired, and they said no man could have behaved more pluckily.

CLEEK OF THE FORTY FACES

By T. W. HANSHAW.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

HE did so forthwith; and the moment the dry leaves fell on the remnants of the fire which the caravanners had used to cook their evening meal, there was a gush of aromatic smoke, a sudden puff and then a broad ribbon of light rushed upward and dispelled every trace of darkness. And by the aid of that ribbon of light Mr. Nippers saw something which made him almost collapse with astonishment and chagrin.

Recognition.

The great of the world may—and often do—forget their meetings with the small fry, but the small fry never cease to remember their meetings with the great or to treasure a vivid remembrance of that immortal day when they were privileged to rub elbows with the elect.

Five years had passed since Mrs. Maverick Narkom, seeking a place wherein to spend the summer holidays with the little Narkoms and their nurses, had let her choice fall upon Lynhaven-Old-Bridges and had dwelt there for two whole months. Three times during her sojourn her liege lord had come down for a week-end with his wife and children, and during one of these brief visits, meeting Mr. Ephraim Nippers, the village constable, in the public highway, had deigned to stop and speak to him and to present him with a sixpenny cigar.

Times had changed since then; Mr. Nippers was now head constable for the district, but he still kept that cigar under a glass shade on the drawing room what-not, and he still treasured a vivid recollection of the great man who had given it to him and whom he now saw sitting on the ground with his coat off and his waistcoat unbuttoned, his mustache uncurled and wisps of dried grass clinging to his touseled hair and all the dignity of office conspicuous by its absence.

"Oh, lummy," said Mr. Nippers with a gulp. "Rut down the hammers of them guns, you two—put 'em down quick! It's Mr. Narkom—Mr. Maverick Narkom, superintendent of Scotland Yard!"

"Hullo!" exclaimed Mr. Narkom, shading his eyes from the firelight and leaning forward to get a clearer view of the speaker. "How the dickens do you know that, my man? And who the dickens are you, any way? Can't say that I remember ever seeing your face before."

Mr. Nippers hastened to explain that little experience of five years ago; but the circumstances which had impressed itself so deeply upon his memory had passed entirely out of the superintendent's.

Just Discovered.

"Oh, that's it, is it?" said he. "Can't say that I recall the occasion; but Mrs. Narkom certainly did stop at Lynhaven-Old-Bridges some four or five summers ago; so, of course, it's possible. By the way, my man, what caused you to make this sudden descent upon us? And what are these chaps who are with you bearing arms for? Anything up?"

"Oh, lummy, sir, yes! A murder's just been committed, sir—leastwise it's only just been discovered; but it can't have been long since it was committed, Mr. Narkom, for Miss Renfrew, who found him, sir, and give the alarm, she says as the poor dear gentleman was alive at a quarter to eight, 'cause she looked into the room at that time to ask him if there was anything he wanted, and he spoke up and told her no, and went on with his figgerin' just the same as usual."

"As usual?" dropped in Cleek. "Why do you say 'as usual,' my friend? Was the man an accountant of some sort?"

"Lummy! no, sir. A great inventor is what he is—or was, poor gentleman. Reckon you must a heard of him some time or another—'most everybody has. Nosworth is the name, sir—Mr. Septimus Nosworth, of the Round House. You could see the tower of it over yon if you was to step out into the road and get clear of these trees."

To Be Continued To-morrow.

:-: The Habit of Lying :-:

"I DON'T know what on earth makes people lie!" sighed McBillip. "They just naturally do it, I suppose. That's the only way I can account for it.

"Now, there's my own daughter, Annabel. She took a notion into her head that she would do some lying. She was staying down in the city and some neighbors of ours went down and called on Annabel there.

"Annabel turned loose. Such a string of stuff as she told them! Every night, she said, she had been out joy riding until 2 o'clock in the morning!

"'Who did the chaperoning?' the neighbors asked, breathlessly.

"'Who did the what?' asked Annabel.

"'Why, the chaperoning. Didn't you have a chaperon?'

"'Well, I should say not,' said Annabel.

"Then Annabel went on to tell that she had been having such a good time with actors and actresses. She knew Maude Adams well, had taken a joy ride with Maude, and Maude wanted to take her with her and make an actress of her, and had promised her $100 a week as a starter. Annabel had also met Sothern and had liked him very well, but she had been obliged to treat him coolly because Julia Marlowe was so jealous.

"She had met a famous aeronaut and he had coaxed her and coaxed her until she finally made a flight with him, and she enjoyed the experience very much and had received several letters and photographs from the aeronaut since he left town.

"Soon after the neighbors got back home with these thrilling tales of what was going on in the city I got word of it. I took the first train to the city. Every bird in the air I thought might be some aeronaut flying off with my daughter. I had made up my mind to yank her out of her aunt's house, where she was visiting, without a word of explanation and get her home at once.

"But when I got to the house I thought better of it. 'What in the world do you mean,' I said to her aunt, 'by allowing my daughter, a girl of tender years, to fly around with aeronauts and actors, and go out riding at all hours of the night without a chaperon?'

"'Are you crazy?' asked her aunt. 'Annabel has been with me every night and has always gone to bed at 10:30. There have been no aeronauts nor actors near her that I know of. I have been with that child every minute, too.'

"When I saw Annabel she said she had made up those yarns just for fun. She said she was bored and wanted to start something. The neighbors had been so easily shocked when they called on her that she couldn't help giving them the full voltage."

Talks With the Unknown

Nora, the Cook

By LILIAN LAUFERTY.

PRETTY, red-haired Irish Nora had been the presiding deity of our kitchen for three years, and I had always prided myself on the kindly, friendly spirit—entirely free from condescension—I had shown toward her. But I have recently learned a little maxim, to wit: When you feel pleased with yourself for the charming democratic spirit you are showing toward some one, you are probably treating that individual in a sufficiently Lady Clara Vere DeVere, Haughty Beauty manner to make the word "sister" slink in shame right out of the English language.

Nora, as an individual, introduced herself to me in this wise: "Do you think your mother would be willing to get another vegetable man and let Mr. Hobbs go?"

"Why do you ask that, Nora?"

Too Much the Gentleman.

"Just as a favor to me, Miss. You see it's this way: Mr. Hobbs keeps a-comin' to see me; I have asked him not agin and agin, and last evening he asked me to marry him, an' I said no, so I think it would be best to get a new vegetable man."

I was inclined to treat the matter facetiously; it was only an affair of the cook's. "Do you think he will revenge himself by giving us inferior vegetables in future, Nora?"

"Oh, no, Miss he is far too much the gentleman for that! You see that is where the trouble lies; he is too much the gentleman."

"You see he owns his own vegetable farm and has a high school education and his folks stand well in the community. Now, how would it do for him to marry a servant girl? He does not belong to my world, Miss; I don't belong to his class, and as I don't hold with such marriages, and there ain't much happiness in them, an' he will probably go tryin' to make love to me, I just thought maybe your mother would fix things so I won't be tempted to do what would never come out well for any of us both."

I considered Nora as a girl like myself. Suppose you consider her, too, little sisters, in your home nests. Think her over as a girl—a real girl—not merely as a cook, and a representative of the servant class.

Chance To Rise.

Suppose a man of a class that had more of education, more of refinement and more of social position than your own, suppose such a man asked you to marry him. Suppose he offered you a haven of refuge—money, protection and freedom from work. Would you "hold with such a marriage?" I think so. And though you might consider the question of romantic love, I doubt very much if you would ever stop to weigh the vast question of suitability. Most of us modest little feminine persons think that, given a position, we can fill it—and so, given a chance to rise in the world, we GRAB!

Nora's idea is different and very simple once you grasp all its modest subtlety. She is actually proud of being a servant; proud that she can earn an honest living by her own efforts; proud that out of her $6 a week she can save enough to send the little mother in Ireland $5 each month; proud that she could bring her younger sister over and fit Annie out so "she wouldn't look such a greenhorn that no one would be wanting her except to tind the extreme back door."

In her own world Nora has many friends. She works hard and plays with gusto, and is quite sure that God called her to a certain place in the world, so why not fill that place to the best of her ability, instead of trying to leap two or three rings of a social ladder to a place she might be entirely unable to fill when she got there? That is Nora's philosophy.

Ambition and Avarice.

"Now, don't think that I have no ambition at all, Miss. I just would like to go on slow and sure in this world and when I am going to go anywhere make sure first that I can stay put after I arrive."

"Now me brogue. I've almost losht thot, ye'll be afther noticin', please, Miss, dear."

I laughed. It was fresh, but refreshing, and Nora had been proving herself a girl who knew her place.

"I've tried other things besides being a servant. I could just live along on the dollar and a quarter a day I could make as a seamstress. Working up in that to where I could support myself and do a little for my folks was too slow, for what I seemed to work up most of all was an appetite. And I could not live on what I could buy. So I took a place and tried to learn manicuring the while. I wasn't the kind for a shop—not bright enough in the way a manicure girl has to be. I seemed lost somehow, and here I am found; so here I stay in the class I belong. And maybe I'll get married, but I'll marry a man who will be having just as much advantage havin' Nora Doyle for a wife as she is goin' to get out of being his missis.

"I don't hold with avariciousness either, Miss, and though I'm going to carry myself as far as I can I'm not for pullin' for some one else or shovin' on my own part."

Do You Enjoy Life?

"But you are young like me, Nora. Don't you want to enjoy life? Don't you ever want a good time?"

"Indeed I do, Miss, and I have it. Please don't think I'm fresh to say it, but sometimes I think I have more fun than you and your friends. I can go to a dance in a white shirt waist and enjoy it fine; if I haven't got a fellow to take me, I can go about by mesilf and have a good time without any one saying a word against me. And oh, Miss, dear, if you only knew what fun it is to have no worries about my own way, working all I can, and havin' all the fun I have time for, and there's no one I envy or who envies me—so now what more should I be after wantin'?"

Pretty red-haired Irish Nora—I think you have just missed the great secret after all.

"A hair, perhaps, divides the false and the true."

"And upon what, prithee, does your life depend?"

Catherine, the chambermaid, who was ashamed of her work, and who dared not let her friends know the nature of that toil lest they cast her aside in scorn—Catherine had no clew to The Secret; of that I am sure. And Nora, for all her wholesome self-respect, misses The Secret Man's" in her calm acceptance of the probable verdict of the "Vegetable Man's" world. There is a middle ground, little sisters, between "avariciousness" and ambition—there is a fair chance for us all to win the respect of a world that may be socially above us, but is never above us if we can pronounce the "Open Sesame" of intelligent, earnest striving forward and upward.

True Sense of Value.

Somewhere among my sisters of toil there is a girl who does her work well, who is proud of the doing, and who has the fearless democracy that will enable her to rise to the place where the interviewer who comes after me will talk to her and not report that chat as an "Interview With an Unknown."

Morning and Evening as Dame Fashion Wills

A THEATER WRAP.

This wrap is made up of white embroidered net. It is trimmed with a high collarette of black plaited net. The wrap is draped in a very pretty movement of pannier, and is finished by a high flounce of embroidered net, held up by a lon a long cord of passementerie.

A MORNING OR TEA DRESS.

For late morning lounging or an afternoon tea gown, a slip of lemon accordeon plaited silk muslin, and a small coat of tussor striped emberald green, bordered by piping of the same color.

A DINNER GOWN.

Persian blue charmeuse is this gown's material. The bodice is made of a band of ivory satin. The decollete is fastened in front by a huge rose of red velvet. The skirt is made in two parts, a flat slip with a draped train, the second crossing in front and making a draped knot on the side at the knee.

Daysey Mayme and Her Folks

A Loyal D. A. R.

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

LYSANDER JOHN APPLETON always looks on the bright side. It is a good habit for a man of family to cultivate, or else—but why digress?

Lysander John has the bright side habit in such perfect development that if he had preacher kin he could find pleasure in bragging that when the preacher kin preaches they have to put chairs in the aisles.

An Optimist.

His wife is an enthusiastic member of the Daughters of the Revolution. When she added D. A. R. receptions and D. A. R. meetings and D. A. R. excursions to club, society, home missionary and church work, he ate his cold potatoes without complaint, remembering that he had read somewhere cold meals are better for the stomach than hot. He cultivated the bright side habit so assiduously that he became a veritable Little Ray of Sunshine on a rainy day. He even ventured to inquire with some interest one evening while eating his cold meat what was the good of the order. He wanted to impress his wife with his lack of resentment, but, alas, the question suggested skepticism, ignorance and doubt, and aroused her to spirited defense.

"What is the good of it?" she exclaimed. "Isn't it just like a man to ask such a foolish question? The good we do is boundless."

In her wrath she took a quick breath that snapped her corset string. "It is boundless," she repeated, snapping another. "I'll recall one noble deed out of ten hundred equally noble.

"Last summer we got trace of a man who fought in the Revolutionary war, and who was buried in a little country grave-yard in Western Nebraska. His poor grave was all sunk in and neglected."

What They Did.

Here she stopped to wipe away a sympathetic tear. "Do you know what we did? We gave a fair that lasted three days and raised $38.54 for a wreath of tuberoses to be sent by express and laid on that poor, sunken, neglected grave!

"Oh, it is a beautiful thought that after all these weary years that poor dead man's grave was remembered at last! Think what such a tribute means to posterity! Look at its influence on patriotism! Think what it means to HIM!"

Here the picture of a wreath lying on that poor man's grave after so many unflowered years caused such emotion that she broke more corset strings, and had to leave the room for repairs.

The Omniscience of Love

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

"A lover sees his sweetheart in everything he loks at, just as a man bitten by a mad dog, sees dogs in his meat, dogs in his drink, dogs all around him."—George Denison Prentice.

A man and young women in his office recently had this experience.

"What," he called to a young man, "is the address of the firm to which you made that consignment this morning?"

The young man looked up absently from his work and said dreamily, "Madeline, Madeline Grey."

To a girl stenographer later, the employer put this question, "Have you finished the first bunch of letters?" She looked a little startled as she replied, "I didn't know you wanted to know him. His name is Paul, and he is a civil engineer."

Why Do They Day Dream?

In both instances the employer made some comment about the world going mad, and he would be glad when this falling in love had gone out of fashion. "Why," he complained to me later, "if I give a young man a valuable blue print to study, I have to watch him like a hawk to keep him from covering it with drawings of a girl's face, and I haven't a girl working for me who hears the first time she is addressed. She is away off in some dream boat with George or Bill or John."

It is the omniscience of love. It is a sweet insanity that calls for renewed vigilance from those who are sane to keep the prosaic affairs of the world moving in their right grooves.

This employer grumbled, but he also laughed, and a grumble with a laugh underneath indicates a sympathy which is but poorly concealed. He knew what it was from experience. I hope we all do. To have seen one's sweetheart all around one has a most broadening effect on the sympathies. It also makes us charitable when suffering the annoyance that this love madness in others causes.

The girl in the kitchen fills the sugar bowl with salt; the girl on the car going to work rides ten blocks beyond her destination and is late; the girl with no greater duties than presiding at pink tea tables sees only with the outer eyes the guests she is addressing. From the humblest walk to the highest everything is awry, misplaced, lost or forgotten, because those who love see the object of their love in all around them.

The value of concentration is unknown; the necessity of putting one's thought on the nearest duty and keeping at a safe distance all temptation to let the mind wander, has no place in the consciousness of those who are in love.

Of Course Not!

A young girl writes to ask if she is to be blamed because she thinks so much of her lover she can't keep her mind on her work. Bless her, no! The blame is not hers. It goes away back to the one who invented loving.

On the shoulders of that great humanitarian there rests the blame of all the sweet folly that begins with the day when a man and woman discover they are in love, and ends when their dream boat bumps hard on the shore of that barren-looking island called Matrimony.

The bump will come soon enough. It will also be hard enough. It will come soon enough and hard enough to suit the most unsympathetic and unromantic.

And so I say to this litle girl, Go on dreaming that you see your lover in all around you. It is your privilege and your right.

Both Made Mistakes.

THERE hae been many innocent mistakes made by parsons. Among them is oe told of a certain clergyman who left a notice in his pulpit to be read by the preacher who exchanged with him. The minister neglected to denote carefully a private postscript, and the people were astonished to hear the stranger end by saying:

"You will please come to dine with me at the parsonage after service."

Another amusing story is told of a minister. The reverend gentleman was inclined to be absent-minded, and while walking one day met a young lady whose face seemed familiar to him. Taking her to be one of his parishioners' daughters, and not wishing to pass her without notice, he stepped forward and cordially shaking her hands, entered into conversation. After comparing notes about the weather, he had at last to confess:

"I know your face quite well, but where have I seen you before?"

"Oh, please, sir, I am your new parlor maid," was the reply.

A Spring Song

"JOHN," said Mrs. Snitzer, "Mrs. Gifford has a new hat."

"What of it?" asked John, innocently.

"John Snitzer! Mrs. Gifford is the last! All the other neighbors got spring hats long ago. As long as Mrs. Gifford kept me company it was endurable. But now she has deserted me and joined the majority. I can't stand it! I must have a new hat!"

"I am surprised at Mrs. Gifford!" growled Snitzer. "She always seemed such a sensible woman. She could retain her status independent of her hats. She is a woman of intellect and horse sense. It is all right for climbers to dress up in the latest styles. They have to. But Mrs. Gifford could wear her husband's hat."

"That is what I thought," said Mrs. Snitzer. "But she has weakened and now she wears a new hat."

"Very well. I give up. Do likewise. However, I hope you will not buy a hat that will look like an explosion in a hothouse."

"No," said Mrs. Snitzer, "I will not."

"Nor like a scrambled rainbow."

"No."

"Ah, I am much relieved! It's to be really a hat, then?"

"Yes."

"A hat to wear?"

"Yes, to kind of wear, you know."

"Yes, I know. It will either conceal one eye and one ear or one eye and both ears or both eyes and one ear or both eyes and both ears, or it will be suspended on top of the head and not touch anything."

"No, it will be a hat, and it will look like a hat, and it will have just one little feather sticking up like a question mark, or rather it is a good deal like a sickle or a shepherd's crook.

"The sickle idea is good. It signifies that the old man gets trimmed. The crook is good, too. The bigger the crook on the hat the bigger the crook the old man has to be to be able to pay for it. Yours will have to be more like a button hook, my dear. I am outclassed in that line.

"Oh, you have selected it already?"

"Not exactly. I can not decide between a yellow crook and a black one."

"Take a black one, by all means. It sounds rather operatic. Yes, I am sure it should be a crook of the deepest dye. Kindly take this coat of mine, my dear, and hold it near the light. I want to see to part my hair, so I will use the coat for a mirror."

Do You Know That—

The "Woman's Court," inaugurated in Chicago, has proved a great success. Convinced that there were many cases in which a woman would prove a better arbitrator with her own sex than a mere man, Judge Pinckney appointed Miss Mary Bartelme to take over all essentially feminine cases. She has proved most successful in dealing with wayward girls, or those "who never had a chance." No men are admitted to "Judge" Bartelme's court when cases of this class are being dealt with, the probation officers, court bailiffs, clerk and official stenographers and reporters being all women.

Tan Teong, a Chinaman, residing in Malay Straits, was recently fined $100, with the alternative of three weeks imprisonment, for selling his adopted baby for $50 to buy a coffin in which to bury his wife.

In the stomach of a crocodile which was shot by Mr. Wells on the Merguan estate, Madras, were found a python 13 feet long, two tobacco pipes, a number of pieces of whisky bottles and a pair of trousers.

The average number of horses killed in Spanish bull fights every year exceeds 5,000, while from 1,000 to 1,200 bulls are sacrificed.

More newspapers are printed in the United States than in England, France and Germany combined.

The first electric railway in the world was built in Ireland, from Bushmills to Giants Causeway.

Shipping casualties of all nationalities last year totaled 108 vessels, with a tonnage of 114,231.

In London only persons over the age of sixteen may pawn goods.

Great Britain owns 65 submarine naval vessels, France 58, the United States and Japan 12.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DON'T SPEAK TO HIM AGAIN.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am 16 years of age. Last summer I met a man six years my senior whom I have learned to love dearly, and know that my love is reciprocated. My father was opposed to him, and insulted him, which he took like a man, and I was forbidden to speak to him. I had not spoken to him for about three weeks, and one day I met him. Breaking my father's command, I spoke to him, and found we love each other dearly. I speak to a number of other men, but I find that I couldn't love any as I love him. TRUSTFUL.

You are only 16 and your father knows better than you know who is the best company for you. Don't speak to the man again; make no attempt to see him, and don't deceive your father or disobey him again.

IT CERTAINLY IS.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

In riding in the elevator of an office building is it not the proper thing for a gentleman to remove his hat when a lady is riding on the same elevator, even though he is not acquainted with her? ETIQUETTE.

Thank you for asking the question. It furnishes opportunity for making a statement I hope many men will read. A gentleman always removes his hat when riding in an elevator with a lady whether he is acquainted or not.

YOU ARE VERY FOOLISH.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am 18 and about three months ago met a young man who called on me frequently, and I thought he cared for me. One evening he made an appointment but never came. On the following day he sent word he had gone on a distant business trip for an indefinite stay. I found his so-called "trip" was a falsehood. He did not offer an apology, but said he would tell me some time later. He saw me home that evening and made another appointment, but when the time came he sent a note saying he could not come and offered a fairly good excuse. He made another appointment for a week later, but he never came. In spite of all, I love him still. HEARTBROKEN.

If you permit this man to make another appointment with you, you will deserve the neglectful treatment you are receiving.

TIME WILL AID YOU.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Recently I returned to my home town, and while there most of my time was spent with the girl dearest to me. Some of the town boys, who were envious of me, did their best to put me in a false light. They succeeded in doing so as far as her mother is concerned. The consequence is that I am not allowed to visit at her house any more. T. P. C.

This is unfortunate, but so long as the girl remains true you have no cause for worry. Conduct yourself in such a way the mother will be convinced she has been unjust to you. No pleading, no argument, no intervention of friends will help you as much as your own good conduct.

A MATTER OF NO MOMENT.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am 16 and was going with a boy the same age. The other day he sent me a letter, and my father would not give it to me. I wrote and told the boy not to write me any more letters and I would state why the next time I saw him.

I have not heard of him since. Do you think I hurt his feelings? E. F. G.

Your father was right, I am sure, and the young man should not blame you for an obedience which is really both rare and commendable. You said you would explain when you saw him. If he avoids you, it is evident he doesn't care for the explanation.

Try to put him out of your mind.

Some Missing.

Bulkins was very pious, very fond of the ladies and very bald on the back of his head. The other evening he was calling on a girl, and was giving her considerable church talk.

"Ah, Miss Mary," he said, "we are watched over very carefully. Even the hairs of our heads are numbered."

"Yes, Mr. Bulkins," she replied, "but some of the back numbers of yours appear to be missing!"

STOCK EXCHANGE GOVERNORS ARE CLEANING HOUSE

But Public Hostility to Wall Street and Its Business Is Still Rampant.

BY B. C. FORBES.

The New York Stock Exchange governors are manifesting unprecedented vigilance. They have done more real housecleaning than the public realize. The suspension last week of two members is significant of the new order. The Exchange also probed a complaint against an important banking house, but did not find that the facts warranted reprisals.

* * *

The Hearst papers have vigorously advocated Stock Exchange reform. They have also insisted again and again upon a fuller measure of publicity. But the managers of the Stock Exchange have no control whatever over non-members. This point is too often forgotten.

* * *

The Stock Exchange cannot make men honest. Governments have been trying to do that for centuries, but human nature has remained human nature. The best the Exchange can do is to watch closely the doings of its members and immediately pounce upon wrong-doers. That more is being done in this direction than ever before no one familiar with Wall Street will deny. That there is room for further improvement is also admitted.

* * *

Public hostility to Wall Street is still rampant. Several recent incidents have not tended to allay it. Numbers of newer industrial stocks have been handled disgracefully by insiders. Outsiders have lost heavily. Whether the Exchange authorities—or the Federal authorities—can do anything to stop such flimflamming is an open question.

* * *

A correspondent has seen a lengthy communication which is illustrative of how a good many people feel toward Wall Street. He berates me for not scolding Wall Street enough, for not "going for" Albany politicians and for once in a while discussing the better side of human nature. He refers to the manipulation of certain newer shares on the Stock Exchange, and then adds:

"This dirty finance is, in my judgment by far the most important question before the American people to-day. It seems to pervade all classes of bankers, promoters and corporation officials. Every piece of news is "discounted" on the Stock Exchange, which is only another way of saying that the insiders have played their official knowledge against the stockholders and the public. Juggling of figures for the benefit of officials, speculating in the stocks of their companies, is so common as to be almost the rule; and Wall Street smiles indulgently, as who should say, "Yes; it's crooked but it's part of the game."

"The Stock Exchange appears helpless. It does not dare to discipline any of the "big men," because it is absolutely dependent on the co-operation of the banking houses and directors of the principal corporations for its existence.

* * *

"A few years ago, when Mr. Harriman returned from abroad to die, the head of one of our largest banking houses went to see him the day before his death, and was then reported to have given out an interview in which he said, 'Mr. Harriman is practically a well man.' This enabled a rally in Union Pacific to about 211; but not so many months later, after the insiders had unloaded, the stock was down some 60 points. Did the Stock Exchange ever take any notice of this? No; it didn't dare. This same banker to-day holds up his head and takes a prominent part in civic and charitable movements among men who presumably are honest and honorable. Meantime, are we uncharitable in assuming that the banking house of which he is head, sold its Union Pacific above 200, where it has never been since?

"While the standard of morality in Wall Street is so low, it is useless to hope for improvement from within. This financial clique has shown itself impervious to any sentiment of decency, and utterly opposed to any effort to destroy its system of graft. Incorporation of the Stock Exchange, periodical reports of earnings, financial conditions, etc., of concerns whose securities are listed, are steps toward reform of conditions.

"But the real vital issue is plain honesty; reforming conditions, after all, only reforming the machinery. We must find means of compelling honest and disinterested service in the directors of our large corporations, and plain honesty in the officers of our bank."

* * *

Well some of us have been trying our best to preach honesty, and to criticise dishonesty. But miracles cannot be wrought in the twinkling of an eye. It is some consolation to know that the trend is in the right direction.

CLAYTON RAPS LAKE ASPHALT PLEA BY SMITH

Construction Chief Reiterates He Won't Pay More Than $21.75 for Material.

City Chief of Construction R. M. Clayton to-day gave out a statement sharply attacking Chairman Shelby Smith, of the County Commission, for his attitude in urging the purchase of lake asphalt at practically twice the price at which oil asphalts can be purchased. He reiterated that he would not approve material costing more than $21.75 a ton.

Captain Clayton quotes records of analyses by the Pratt Laboratory, of Atlanta, and Dow & Smith, of New York, stating that the oil asphaltz were as good as the lake asphalts.

Raps Smith's Lack of Data.

"I don't know any other way to determine its worth except by chemical analysis," said Captain Clayton. "But Chairman Smith, after two years of experience, comes forth as an expert without even this data.

"I am informed that no specifications were required for the recent bids received by the County Commissioners and that no bids were advertised for, but notice was sent to a few preferred dealers.

"The county board is proceeding in the dark. They are about to pay exorbitant prices with the people's tax money for material that can be secured at just prices."

Claims Difference in Prices.

He recalled how the city advertised for bids on asphalt and awarded the contract to the Texas Company for $21.75 a ton for oil asphalt. Then he stated that the County Commission is about to pay $44.94 and $39 per ton for lake asphalt.

"By scientific test the cheaper product proves to be just as good as the lake asphalts," continued Captain Clayton. "Chairman Smith said he would take the convicts off the city streets if the material specified by the county were not used. I have nothing to say about what he does with the county convicts, but I never will consent to a squandering of the people's money. The city will not pay more than $21.75 per ton for asphalt.

"He criticises Atlanta's streets. They all are paved with the lake asphalt he is insisting on."

COTTON CLOSES AT LOW LEVELS

Spot Houses Stop Many Notices. General Selling Follows Forecast of Warmer Weather.

NEW YORK, April 28.—There was a steady tone in the cotton market to-day at the opening, prices being 6 points lower to 2 points higher. Trading was quite active and sentiment somewhat mixed. Notices of about 50,000 bales were issued this morning, but from the character of the buying they were being well cared for.

Liverpool was a buyer after the opening and brokers who frequently act for spot houses bought old crops.

Immediately after the opening, a large quantity of May contract notices were issued. Tenders were quickly absorbed by McFadden, Craig and Liverpool, resulting in the market developing a steady tone, with May advancing 12 points to 11.37; July was under aggressive buying by the larger spot houses and rallied 13 points to 11.53, while other positions gained 5 to 8 points over the initial level. Offerings were rather liberal, which was said to be profit-taking.

During the forenoon a wave of selling, thought to be profit-taking, caused the old crop positions to sag a few points under the early best, while new crops showed weakness, inspired by free offerings from the ring and Wall Street. Prices dropped about 4 points under the opening level.

The map indicates favorable weather over the entire belt. The map shows fair and warmer, with the exception of stationary temperatures in North Carolina and East Tessennee. Cloudy weather in the Atlantics with general to light rains as needed are shown. Higher temperatures will prevail over the western and central half, which offsets the prospects for frost, which has been a stimulating factor in the market and causing considerable unfavorable apprehension among short sellers.

During the late forenoon the market faced general selling by brokers who were early purchasers. McFadden and other big spot interests sold July heavily, also May. Wall Street and the ring crowd continued to liquidate. No one seemed to want cotton and prices fell 8 to 13 points under the previous close. May dropped to 11.24, July to 11.32, August to 11.24, October to 11.01, December to 11.04, while January touched 11 cents. There was no support in evidence. Everything was bearish. Weather news and crop reports were against the market.

The long interests seem pretty well eliminated and the average trader inclined to sell further short. New crop months showed considerable weakness, as the interest has been centered in the old crop positions. The buying was exceptionally light and concentrated.

At the close the market was steady, with prices a net decline of 6 to 13 points from the final quotations of Saturday.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, April 28.—The political situation in Europe at the moment is very critical and important developments are set for to-day. Paris says the financial situation and outlook are unfavorable, owing to the prospective heavy taxation for the purpose of providing for military needs.

Weather conditions over Sunday were favorable, except over the northeastern belt, where night temperatures were too low.

Liverpool came in with futures about 4 points lower than due on old crops. Spots were 3 points lower.

Our market opened about 2 points higher and was carried 6 points further up on a sudden advance of 20 points in May in New York, which gave hope of professional bull support in that option.

The general situation is recognized as so unfavorable that the following of any suggested bull move is more than cautious. This accounts for the rapid loss of the advance here as soon as May in New York eased.

COTTON GOSSIP

This is the first May notice day in New York. It is a difficult task to get a correct line on the amount tendered, but it was rumored Saturday that fully 69,000 bales would be tendered. Some of the large spot houses were credited with absorbing the greater quantity.

* * *

* * *

According to special reports sent to The Journal of Commerce, the cotton acreage will be increased in Arkansas, Louisiana and Tennessee. The season is earlier than last year and the ground in a fair state of preparation. Weather conditions have been very favorable to the crop.

* * *

The Lake St. John levee, twelve miles north of Ferriday, La., went out yesterday, flooding lower Tensas and Concordia Parishes.

* * *

Brown, Drakeford & Co., Liverpool, cable: "Spot houses and Continent selling old crops."

* * *

Memphis wires: "Memphis territory, cloudy to clear; prospects clear and warmer."

* * *

Dallas wires: "Texas and Oklahoma clear and pleasant."

* * *

Following are 11 a. m. bids: May, 11.38; July, 11.42; October, 11.06; January, 11.05.

* * *

NEW ORLEANS, April 28.—Hayward & Clark: The weather map is very favorable. It shows cloudy over the Atlantics with general rains as needed; fair and no rain and warmer over Central and Western States.

* * *

Washington forecast for week: Generally fair weather, moderate temperatures during next several days in Southern States. Disturbance now in far Northwest will move slowly eastward and prevail over the great Central valley about Thursday. It will cause local showers and thunder storms in the latter part of the week in the Southern States.

* * *

Liverpool cables: "American middling fair, 7.22d; good middling, 6.70d; low middling, 6.54d; good ordinary, 6.20d; ordinary, 5.86d."

* * *

The following report came from a well-known crop reporter: "From Dallas, Shreveport and Jackson to New Orleans and North and East Texas the soil is in perfect condition. Planting is general. In Louisiana and Mississippi planting is general. Work is well advanced. Some cotton is up in the central and southern parts. Dry and cool weather prevented rapid germination, but general rains have fallen over the greater part of Texas, Louisiana and Mississippi. Rain was excessive in parts of Louisiana and Mississippi. Conditions are fairly normal, except that river conditions are extremely critical."

* * *

The steady decline in the Atlantic spot markets, which suggests liquidation, is being particularly watched.

Following are 10 a. m. bids: May, 12.12; July, 11.91; August, 11.55; October, 11.18; January, 11.21.

LARGE INTERESTS SUPPORT STOCKS

War News Abroad and California Situation Blamed for Break. Inactive Issues Weak.

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, April 28.—Weakness was dominant at the opening of the stock market to-day and losses ranging from fractions to about 2 points were scored by many important issues. Trading was very active. The pressure resulted from the European war scare.

Among the losses were Amalgamated Copper 1⅛, American Can 1½, American Smelting 1, Canadian Pacific 1⅞, St. Paul 1, Erie ¼, Illinois Central ¾, Lehigh Valley 1⅛, Missouri Pacific ⅞, United States Steel common ¼, Utah Copper ¼, Union Pacific ⅜, Reading ⅞ and Pennsylvania ⅛.

After a half hour's trading, a stronger tone developed and some of the stocks made partial recoveries. New York Central advanced ⅝, while Northern Pacific gained ¼. American Can recovered nearly all its decline. Missouri Pacific recovered and gained.

The curb market was easy.

Americans in London were above New York parity, but did not give assurance of stability. Canadian Pacific in London was weak on Continental selling.

Severe losses were recorded in the market during the forenoon. Lehigh Valley lost 1⅝ to 154⅜. Canadian Pacific declined 2 points to 240½. St. Paul broke a point to 108. United States Steel ⅛ off. Amalgamated Copper was off ⅝. Fractional losses were recorded in all the other issues.

Money loaning at 2⅞@¾.

There was not much change in the last hour. Amalgamated Copper sold around 73 for a gain of ½ over the midday level. Steel crossed 60 for a gain of ⅝. Reading, United States Rubber, American Can and American Smelting made fractional gains over the noon range. Lehigh Valley declined. Trading was quiet.

Wheat—No. 2 red ....110 @112½
Corn—No. 2 ....58½
Oats—No. 2 35

CHICAGO, April 28.—The sharp advance in the price of wheat at Liverpool this morning was the bull help at Chicago, coupled with the unfavorable weather in the United Kingdom and the backward seeding there. Northwestern receipts were considerably in excess of a year ago and the same may be said of the world's shipments.

Corn was unchanged to ⅛ to ⅜c higher on the unsettled weather in the Argentine, which is unfavorable for the movement and is likely to create a demand from abroad for American corn.

Oats were unsettled with September strong and other months weak.

Under a run of 60,000 hogs at Chicago and a 20-cent decline in the price at the yards hog products were 12½ to 17½c lower early.

Wheat closed strong at about the best price reached, showing gains for the day of ⅝c to ¾c with the exception of takings at Chicago, which were small at 25,000 bushels. The total sales here were 75,000 bushels, part of which was forced on the millers.

Corn closed ⅜c to ½c higher and oats were up ⅛c to ¼c.

Cash sales were corn 135,000 bushels and oats 95,000 bushels.

Provisions closed lower on the severe break in hogs as the day wore away.

OCCASIONAL OBSERVATIONS

The head of a corporation whose securities have slumped millions of dollars since recently floated ventured into Wall Street last week and was roughly handled. One banking firm caught in the smash-up nearly came to blows with him. The end is not yet.

Financial conditions in Mexico are expected to attract unpleasant notice. Things are nearing a deadlock, bankers learn.

* * *

From a well-informed source it is learned that the enormous stock holdings of a veteran multi-millionaire are being sold whenever the market will absorb them. This throws light on the liquidation of certain high-grade issues usually very inactive. The seller is planning to retire from the business arena.

* * *

Any one walking along Wall Street after an absence of half a dozen years would rub his eyes in bewilderment, so great have been the changes in its buildings. Another pretentious bank building will be opened in the world's best known thoroughfare this week, while Morgan & Co.'s new home will shortly begin to rise on the site of the doomed Drexel Building. Everybody downtown is becoming aesthetic. It costs money.

* * *

The alternative to dear money in the fall is duller trade. The latter is the more probable.

* * *

"Let 'em all come" is the slogan of certain railroad presidents in reference to the men's demands for higher wages. The heavier the addition to pay-rolls forced upon the roads, the less excuse will the Interstate Commerce Commission have for refusing an offsetting increase in freight rates.

* * *

The bond worm is about to turn, it would seem. Borrowers are refusing to pay the price demanded. A change in the status appears to be due.

* * *

California is not hurting Wall Street. You can't kill a dead dog.

* * *

"I was talking to J. P. Morgan today," began one man. "What?" ejaculated the other. "I mean J. P., junior," hastily added the speaker. Wall Street hasn't yet become accustomed to a new "J. P. Morgan."

Naval Stores Houses Oust 'Middle Man'

Government Approval Is Secured to Plan to Sell Direct to the Consumer.

SAVANNAH, GA., April 28.—Naval stores factors in Savannah and Jacksonville, who handled 85 per cent of the product at these ports, have arranged, with the approval of the Government, to go back to the old method of doing business, eliminating the middle man, or such a selling company as the American Naval Stores Company.

According to J. A. G. Carson, president of the Carson Naval Stores Company, who returned from Washington, where he was in conference with the Attorney General on the prohibition, the operation of the plan will revolutionize the methods of distributing rosin, and will effectively eliminate the speculator.

Alexander Ackerman, of Macon, District Attorney, accompanied the delegation to Washington.

A general meeting of the naval stores factors of the South has been called for this city on Friday for the purpose of perfecting plans to market naval stores direct to the consumer. The agreement as at present outlined will affect rosins only, but it is said that the factors may decide later to market spirits in the same way.

New Carat Weight Has Been Adopted

Uniform Decimal System Will Be Employed in Selling Precious Stones.

NEW YORK, April 28—Lack of uniformity in the weight of the carat for different countries has induced American dealers in diamonds and other precious stones to adopt a uniform decimal carat weighing exactly one-fifth of a gram, or 200 milligrams. The new weight will be used by American jewelers beginning July 1.

France, Germany, Austria, Italy, Spain and Japan now use the international carat. England has not yet legalized it.

The new weight reduces the size of a carat by 2 1-2 to 3 per cent.

CENTRAL WINS MANY FRIENDS BY WRECK JURY

Railway Has Citizens' Committee Investigate and Help Place Blame for Accidents.

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

The Central of Georgia has inaugurated a plan of investigating wrecks in which persons are injured that is meeting with great favor along its routes, and winning for it many frank expressions of approbation and commendation.

Recently a passenger train was derailed at Lovejoy, and the Central promptly called in a committee of citizens, selected from the immediate vicinity of the wreck, to assist in clearing up the blame in so far as it might be cleared up.

This board, after a fair inquiry, decided that the wreck came about through a broken rail, and the road accepted the verdict as just and right.

Not only has this greatly pleased the people affected by this wreck, which was a relatively small one, but it has made them more friendly to the road than ever before. They say they never will have any trouble getting along if the road meets them in that sort of spirit always.

It is understood that the Central proposes to adopt this plan whenever it can in the future, and there can be little doubt it will make for a better and more cordial understanding between the road and the public.

In every Georgia Legislature there is a contingent of anti-railroad legislators, ready to back any old thing that has an anti-railroad twist. Many of these men are persons who have come in contact once or twice with the railroads in their old-time secretiveness concerning wrecks.

Whereas it used to be the policy of the roads to close up like clams whenever a wreck occurred and to tell nothing, they now are insisting upon telling just as much as they can tell. By inviting citizens to assist them in getting at the truth, and roads are able to establish the facts in a nonpartisan way, and the resulting story of the wreck is accepted as the truth of it.

Much of the old-time friction between the Legislature and the railroads has died out, and this new attitude upon the part of the Central likely will serve still further to relegate ill feeling to the rear.

Major Claude C. Smith, Judge Advocate General of the Georgia National Guard, announces that the following bills will be introduced in the next General Assembly:

First, a law to provide for a change of venue in trial of capital cases where there is danger of mob violence; second, a bill to change the place of execution, when mob violence is feared; third, a bill to empower the Governor to remove a Sheriff from office, when such official fails of his entire duty to the State in time of riot or mob violence.

The Adjutant General will ask the Legislature to increase the annual appropriation for his department from $25,000 to $50,000.

Senator DuBose, who comes from the same county that Mr. Lipscomb represents, inclines to suggest the naming of a board for the purpose of considering this question between sessions, with the requirement that it report a bill providing for the board to the second session of the Legislature.

No matter which plan prevails, however, it already is accepted as a foregone conclusion that the incoming General Assembly is to enact a tax equalization law.

Rome is to have a commission form of government. The people already have voted upon the idea, and a bill will be introduced in the next House seeking its establishment. This law will not become operative, however, until it shall have been passed upon and ratified by the people in another election.

It is an open secret that Claude Arnold, of Walton County, will be an applicant under Governor Slaton for appointment to the office of State Game Warden, which desirable assignment is now held by Jesse Mercer.

Mr. Arnold is one of Walton's genuinely popular men, and already his backers are speaking right out in meeting and urging his fitness for the place. He will be a most formidable candidate for the job—that goes almost without saying.

Up in Rome they recently convicted a preacher of being a "blind tiger."

It seems to be mighty hard to fool "Uncle Seab's" town—just as it is hard to fool "Uncle Seab."

HADLEY 1916 PRESIDENCY BOOM STARTED IN BOSTON

BOSTON, MASS., April 28.—Ex-Governor Herbert S. Hadley of Missouri was boomed for the Republican nomination for Presidency in 1916, and President Nicholas Murray Butler, of Columbia, as his running mate for Vice President, at an enthusiastic stand-pat, protective tariff dinner of the Middlesex Club.

Former Governor John D. Long, Secretary of the Navy under President McKinley, suggested the ticket.

Chub Wall Arrested After 2 Years' Hunt

Federal Officers Hold Georgia Slayer at Clayton on Charge of Moonshining.

After a two-years' search, Chub Wall has been arrested by Federal Officers and is held at Clayton, Ga. He escaped from the Georgia authorities after having served two years of a four-years' sentence for killing an uncle. Detectives had trailed him through the Northwest, but he successfully eluded them until he returned to Georgia.

A man of splendid education and from a refined family, Wall has been in the clutches of the law several times. Ten years ago he was convicted of killing a peddler and given a life sentence, but was pardoned a short while afterward. In an altercation nearly five years ago, he killed his uncle and was given a four-years' sentence.

Selma Man Held in Wife's Death Probe

Former Atlantan Declares Woman Fell From Second Story Window of Their Home.

SELMA, ALA., April 28.—J. D. Summers, a druggist prominent in East Selma business affairs, is under arrest to-day, after a post-mortem examination of the body of his wife, who died under mysterious circumstances.

Summers says his wife was intoxicated and fell to the sidewalk from a second-story window of their home. The State contends the woman was pushed out of the window by her husband.

The woman's back was broken, her ankle crushed and there were wounds in her side.

Summers is a pioneer here, but moved to Atlanta two years ago, returning here last summer. He and his wife were preparing to separate.

Would Send Us All to Jail One Day a Year

Jersey Judge Tells Church Folks It Would Do Everybody Some Good.

NEW YORK, April 28.—Judge Robert Carey, of the Common Pleas Court of Jersey, believes it would do everybody good to spend one day a year in jail. Addressing an audience in the Central Methodist Church of Yonkers on "The Prisoner at the Bar," the jurist said:

"If I had my way every man and woman would serve one day in jail each year. What a different view of life you would get. You would exhibit a new kind of Christianity and charity."

Mother of Eighteen Secures a Divorce

Wife Set Forth That She Had Supported Husband for Eighteen Years.

BRIDGEPORT, CONN., April 28.—A case of fidelity through years of abuse came to light here when Frances Gertrude Wilmot got a divorce from her husband.

Cruelty was the ground for divorce. Evidence tended to show that while the couple were married only nineteen years eighteen children had resulted from the union. The wife had supported her indolent partner for thirteen years.

Special Cable to The Georgian.

PANAMA, April 28.—It is announced that no liquor licenses will be issued in the Canal Zone after July 1. At the present time there are thirty-five saloons in four towns.

EXPERT SWIMMER DROWNS; NON-SWIMMER IS SAVED

CHICAGO, April 28.—That being an expert swimmer does not always prevent drowning was shown when two men fall into the Chicago River at different times and places.

James Robinson, a sailor, who had the reputation of being the best swimmer on Lake Erie, fell from a steamer and was drowned. A barber, who could not swim a stroke, was saved.

POLICE PROMOTE CRIME, SAYS CHICAGO PASTOR

CHICAGO, April 28.—Discussing vice and crime which exists in Chicago, Dr. Francis L. Hayes, pastor of the California Avenue Congregational Church, told his congregation:

"Let Chicago wake up as Pittsburg has to the fact—no longer obscured by official bluff—that the police systems of our great cities promote and encourage crime."

SUSPECT IN ST. ELMO ROBBERY IS CAPTURED

DALTON, GA., April 28.—A negro whose description fits that of Gordon Jones, alleged to have robbed a St. Elmo drug store and shot and seriously wounded Dr. Finis Rogers and Ted Brown Saturday night, is being held at Tunnel Hill, this county. He was caught be a posse to-day.

BLAST KILLED 96; BODIES ALL FOUND SAY RESCUERS

FINLEYVILLE, PA., April 28.—Rescuers, after a thorough search of the Cincinnati mine of the Monongahela River Consolidated Coal and Coke Company, wrecked by an explosion, announced to-day that every body had been recovered. They claim 96 miners lost their lives.

SPINNERS SEE SOME DANGER IN NEW TARIFF

Georgia, With $37,000,000 Capital Invested and 2,025,000 Spindles, Vitally Concerned.

Georgia, with $37,000,000 invested in 160 cotton mills which operate 2,025,000 spindles, is vitally interested in the schedules of the Underwood tariff bill which govern the duties on cotton yarn.

Leading Georgia spinners view the proposed schedules with no great enthusiasm, and, on the other hand, with no great fear.

The effect on Georgia mills, spinners agree, will, for the most part, be indirect. The proposed cut is heaviest on fine yarns, and while some fine yarns are spun in the State, most of the output is coarser numbers.

Eastern mills spin yarns. There seems to be a fear that the proposed cut in fine yarns will force American mills in general to turn to coarser products. This will greatly increase Georgia's competition, and may cause losses.

At the convention in Boston just ended, representatives of the textile industry, gathered from all parts of the Union, said that a reduction in wages would follow any serious cut in the tariff.

Georgia spinners say that decreased wages may be a result, but not immediately, and that eventually any cut in wages is likely to be offset by a reduced cost of living.

All at Eea.

"I do not believe any spinner in America knows just exactly where he stands under the proposed tariff schedules," says A. F. Johnson, President of the Exposition Cotton Mills, which employ 1,000 persons and operate 60,000 spindles.

"The proposed rate, however, seems to me to be a little below the factor of safety. I think spinners can stand some reduction from the present schedule, but I think the Underwood proposals a little too radical.

"The Georgia Manufacturers Association is insisting that the rate be no lower than the schedule proposed by Louis Parker of Greenville, S. C., who offered a schedule to the Congressional Investigating Committee in January, much below the present rate, but not as low as the Underwood bill proposes.

Effect Indirect.

"The effect on the Exposition Mills will be indirect. The competition in the finer yarns, where the proposed cut is greatest, will force American spinners into the coarser, which will increase our competition.

"In general, yarns from 10 to 20 are considered coarse, from 20 to 40, medium and from 40 on, fine."

PRAISES WORK OF CRITTENTON HOME

Mrs. Barrett, Sociological Delegate, Delivers Address at St. Mark's M. E. Church.

Mrs. Kate Waller Barrett, a delegate to the Sociological Congress, in an address at St. Mark Methodist Church yesterday on the work of the Florence Crittenton homes, declared that the laws of both God and man place the highest premium upon the life of man, no matter what his character. The life of a woman of the streets, she said, is rated far above property valuations.

"The Saviour," said she, "put a high valuation upon fallen humanity, for it was to restore it to its God-likeness that he came into the world. One of His greatest works was to cast out the devils from the Magdalene, and the lesson for the people of to-day is contained in his rebuke to Simon for standing aloof when the outcast woman was allowed to administer to the Saviour.

"The Florence Crittenton Home in Atlanta was the third of such institutions founded in America. Twenty-five years ago Mr. and Mrs. Crittenton were given a 93-year lease on part of an old dumping ground. The work has grown and prospered here. Since that time 75 more homes have been founded, three of them in other cities of Georgia. Their mission is to reclaim and reform fallen women.

"The judge of a high court in New York declares the Florence Crittenton Home has enabled him to deal effectively with large numbers of cases that have come before him, which previously had been a vexed problem.

"Florence Crittenton homes are founded on that great principle enunciated by Jesus that life, no matter how degraded, was precious and could be redeemed.

"There are thousands of good churchmen who stand condemned, even as Simon was condemned by Jesus, for refusing to 'soil' their skirts in this great work of redeeming fallen women."

Mrs. Barrett delivered several lectures while in the city. She sails this week for Germany on a mission connected with the work abroad of the Florence Crittenton Home.

Perry Belmont for the Philippines Post

New Yorker Will Be Urged Before Wilson for Position of Governor-General.

WASHINGTON, April 28.—Perry Belmont, of New York and Washington, is being urged by New York Democrats for appointment as Governor General of the Philippines.

Mr. Belmont desires this appointment through sentiment. His ancestor, Admiral Perry, opened Japan to the civilized world. Representative Francis Burton Harrison, of New York, is backing Mr. Belmont and has arranged for a conference with President Wilson to urge that Mr. Belmont be sent to the Philippines post.

Monkeys Find Dying Easy in Philadelphia

More Than Half in Zoo Passed Away Last Year—Ailments of Other Animals.

PHILADELPHIA, April 28.—Conclusive indication that Philadelphia is still a bad place for monkeys, was given at the meeting of the Zoological Society. More than half of the monkeys in the collection died in the year of tuberculosis. Some time ago 78 per cent of the monkeys in Philadelphia died in a year.

Cancer in zoo animals is largely due to the depressed mental condition of the animals, incident to their life of captivity, so it is reported by Dr. Weidman, the pathologist. Other facts disclosed by him were as follows:

Cats and foxes are very liable to intestinal diseases.

A jaguar died of pneumonia.

A polecat died of decomposition.

Kangaroos are susceptible to liver and kidney ailments.

An ostrich died of a fractured leg.

An antelope was kicked to death.

Two camels died a-welcoming the stork.

U. of P. Congratulated by Empress Eugenie

Say Founding of the Dental Institute is the Realization of Dr. Evans' Dream.

PHILADELPHIA, April 28.—A letter from the Empress Eugenie has been received by Dr. E. G. Kirk, dean of the Dental School, congratulating the University of Pennsylvania upon the realization of Dr. Thomas W. Evans' dream of founding a dental institute in Philadelphia, the city of his birth.

Dr. Evans was a dentist in Paris during the second French Empire, and the Empress took refuge in his house after the fall. The carriage in which he conducted her over the French border will be placed in the new museum and institute, the cornerstone of which will be laid on May 3.

MORTGAGES PONY TO GET HIS FRIEND OUT OF JAIL

ANDERSON, GA., April 28.—To get a friend out of jail, R. L. Cheshire, Jr., a lintoype operator, mortgaged his pony to the city. The friend was on a jag and did $55 worth of stunts, according to the recorder.

The fine was cut to $25 and the man placed in jail. Cheshire had one other pet beside his dog, Jumbo, and that was his pony, Pat, so Pat was mortgaged.

WAR SCARE IN CALIFORNIA AS BRYAN ARRIVES

Secretary of State Believed to Carry Message Telling of Threats of Japan.

SACRAMENTO, April 28.—Secretary of State Bryan went into executive session with the members of the California Legislature at 11 o'clock (2 p. m. Atlanta time). Every member of the Legislature, with the exception of those on the sick leave, crowded into the room. Extra guards were placed at the doors and every precaution was taken to see that none but members of the Legislature were present.

SACRAMENTO, April 28.—Intense excitement prevailed in Sacramento to-day following the arrival of Secretary of State Bryan, in connection with the international difficulties subsequent to the introduction of an anti-alien land bill in the California Legislature.

A war scare arrived with Mr. Bryan. Senators and assemblymen refused to comment openly on the message brought by the Secretary of State. Unofficially and in the gossip not only about the State House, but throughout Sacramento to-day it was rumored that Japan virtually had made threats against the United States and that for this reason Secretary Bryan had been rushed to the Pacific Coast by his chief.

That this was the real message carried by Bryan was generally accepted here. The nearest official confirmation came from Assemblyman Benedict, of Los Angeles. He said: "I am of the firm conviction that Japan is straining a point so that it can go to war against the United States. The question then is, 'Shall 3 per cent of the people of the nation plunge the other 97 per cent into a war?'"

No legislator would permit himself to be quoted on what he had heard from anything that might appear to be an official source.

One legislator who would not permit his name to be used said:

"That Mr. Bryan's visit relates directly to the question of war is only a rumor. We must wait to hear his statement directly from his own lips before we can talk."

For the first time since the anti-alien legislation has come up and since the President has sent his personal message direct to Governor Hiram Johnson the party lines to-day were eliminated in the discussion of the land bill.

Fight Before Aiding Japan, Sisson Urges.

WASHINGTON, April 28.—"Before I would surrender one foot of land in California to Japan I would fight," declared Representative Sisson, of Mississippi, in the House to-day. "I am with the people of California, and I would spend the last dollar in the treasury to protect their rights."

Under license of tariff debate Representative Sisson declared that the Federal Government is in duty bound to protect California in exercising its rights, and by implication condemned Secretary Bryan's attempt to persuade the Californians from passing laws that would prevent aliens from holding land.

Japan Holds Land Titles.

"No citizen of any other country has the right to own land in Japan to-day," he asserted. "The alien may lease land, but his title will never pass from the Japanese subjects to subjects of any other nation. It ill becomes Japan to complain.

"If Japan threatens us now, what will she do later on if thousands of her subjects own land in our country? If the United States yields to the demand of Japan, China will have the right to make the same demand and we would be humiliated.

Alludes to Yellow Peril.

"God knows there is not an American here who would allow hordes of Chinese to invade our land with their low standards of living. Everybody knows the Chinese can live on the things that our farmers throw away.

"It is the highest duty of the Federal Government toward the States of the Union to protect them in their rights."

Sisson declared that in none of the treaties between the United States and Japan did either power guarantee the right of land ownership to the subjects of the other.

Japan Would Send Envoy to United States.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, April 28.—The Japanese Diet to-day voted to send Ehara Soroku, a member of the House of Lords, to Sacramento with a view of establishing a better mutual understanding between the California and Japanese Governments, according to a Tokio cablegram.

The Foreign Office was instructed to communicate with the United States Government and also the State Government of California to ascertain what attitude will be taken in the United States upon Soroku's proposed visit.

SNOW, NOT APRIL SHOWERS, IN BLUE RIDGE MOUNTAINS

ANDERSON, S. C., April 28.—Snow fell in the Blue Ridge Mountains last night. At Walhalla and West Union, in Upper South Carolina, a mild snow storm was reported here to-day.

POULTRY, PET and LIVE STOCK

Great Chick Scourge; Care and Treatment

Caused by Neglect and Filth. Feed is Also Potent Factor.

EDITED BY JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL

White diarrhea is the great scourge.

This dread disease, like all other chicken diseases, is caused more often by neglect than anything else. It is caused mainly by crowding 100 chicks into a brooder only suited for 50 chicks, or feeding any kind of food which happens to be the most convenient. And by allowing them to go too long without water so that when they do get it they drink too much, which fails to pass out of the crop as rapidly as it should, and it causes the feed to sour there, and you know the rest of the story.

When you see the chalk-like deposit on the droppings of little chicks you will know there is trouble at hand. Chicks will be apparently all right with the exception of being daubed with this white deposit at night, and, as the Irishman said, wake up dead in the morning.

When you have a brooder full of chicks, or a lot with a hen for that matter, and some of them show signs of the trouble on close examination cull every such one out and get rid of him. The sooner the better. Clean their quarters in a thorough manner, washing everything with which they have come in contact with hot water and a scrub brush. Then use some good disinfectant. Sun it well to be sure it is dry before you let the chicks in again. Put plenty of road dust sifted upon the floor. Feed carefully for several days; place in a shallow pan a handful of beef scraps; upon this place some good pure wheat bran. Feed some good dry chick grain in the litter two or three times a day, and pay special attention to their drinking water. A good-sized fountain is the best as it keeps the water cool longer than an open vessel. See that this is cleansed thoroughly and filled with clean water once a day. A little care and attention to details where they have been neglected will usually right matters. Remember—that crowding will also bring trouble. The only way to stamp out any infectious disease is to get rid of the infected ones.

Scaly Leg.

Judge Marshall: I want to ask you a question about some of my hens. Quite a number of them have very large rough legs. They are almost twice the size of the other hens' legs, and seem stiff, so that they can hardly walk. Can you tell me what the trouble is and some good remedy for it? MRS. S. R. W.

Dalton, Ga.

Answer: Your hens are afflicted with what is commonly known as scaly legs. It is a very annoying trouble, but one that can be very easily controlled if taken in time. It is caused by a burrowing insect which digs its way under the scales of the leg and throws out the rough matter, which hardens and clings to the surface of the leg and causes the very unsightly appearance which you mention. After they have worked at it for many months, in some instances, it becomes so thick and heavily incrusted that it stiffens the joints so much that it makes it difficult for the fowl to walk. The wise thing to do is when you notice the first traces of it in your flock to get to work at once and dip every one that shows the least signs of the trouble into a can of kerosene just up to the feathers, but not onto them. Repeat this in about a week, and if they are not very rough two applications will effect a cure. Then they should be treated with a little cotton seed oil, or something of that nature to smooth them up. In cases like yours, where they have so badly roughened, it will be necessary to give them a number of treatments of the kerosene to effect a cure. It takes time to get the roughened surface loosened up and cleaned off. Do not try to pull it off with the fingers as that will cause it to bleed and leave a sore place. Just give the oil time to get in its work killing out the insects and loosening the foreign matter. It is a trouble that is transmitted from one to another, so that it is advisable to get rid of it as soon as possible.

Hollywood Cemetery Sold, Says Report

Northern Capitalists Buyers—Application for Permit to Erect $250,000 Y. M. C. A.

It was reported on good authority to-day that Philip S. Holt and E. G. Jackson, of the Adair & Holt Real Estate Agency, had sold to a syndicate of Northern capitalists Hollywood cemetery, on the Marietta car line, a 195-acre tract, for $100,000 or more.

This property has changed hands several times. It will now be improved and will continue in use as a cemetery. A new road will be cut through from Marietta Road, which will make the place more accessible.

The buyers, it is understood, have had an option some time, and they are said to have exercised it.

Y. M. C. A. Building Permit.

Application was made to-day to Building Inspector Ed R. Hays for permission to build the new Young Men's Christian Association building at 73 Luckie Street, at a cost of $250,000. This structure is to be eight stories and of reinforced concrete construction. Details have been announced previously. The builder is the King Lumber Company, of Richmond, and the architects Shattuck & Hussey and A. Ten Eyck Brown.

Lots Bring $22,000.

The L. P. Bottenfield Real Estate Agency announced to-day the sale during opera week of 22 lots for an aggregate of $21,900. Five of these were in the Peachtree Highlands subdivision, $9,200; two in Peachtree Heights annex, $1,600; eight in Woodlawn, $4,800; four in East Lake Park, $1,500; two in Kirkwood Park, $3,000, and one in Peachtree Heights, $1,800.

More Houses Rented.

Houses and apartments rented or leased in the past few days by the Charles P. Glover Realty Company include the following:

Garage, rear 33 Auburn Avenue, to Newsom Auto Company; 156-B Courtland Street, to D. Lowenstein; 88 Highland Avenue, to C. M. King; apartment, 14 Simpson Street, to A. P. DeBorde; second floor 135 Ivy Street, to Mrs. Alice Davison; 6 Dickson Place, to O. J. Allen; first floor apartment, 1 Baltimore Place, to Mrs. Heard; third floor apartment, 1 Baltimore Place, to M. Bryan's Narrow "Little Navy" Policy the Cause of His Visit to California.

The selection of Mr. Bryan to visit California and persuade the citizens there to abandon the exercise of their sovereign rights and to bow timorously and obsequiously before the threats of Japan is peculiarly appropriate.

The reason that Californians are asked to give up their rights in order to pacify Japan, and to sacrifice their interests and the interests of the country at large in order to please the Japanese, is because we have no sufficient navy, and the main reason that we have no sufficient navy is because Mr. Bryan has exerted his influence among his unthinking followers in the Democratic House to prevent the country from having a sufficient navy.

This visit to California, therefore, will give Mr. Bryan an opportunity to demonstrate to the country the advantages of his peace-at-any-price policy. It will give him a conspicuous chance to establish his superiority in wisdom and patriotism to George Washington, who said:

"To be prepared for war is one of the most effectual methods of preserving peace."

Mr. Bryan is noted for his eloquence, if for nothing else, and it will take considerable eloquence to prove that war is cheaper than a reasonable naval insurance against war, and to convince the citizens of California that Abraham Lincoln was wrong when he said:

"One half day's cost of this war would pay for all the slaves in Delaware at $400 a head."

It will take quite a flow of oratory to convince the citizens of the country generally that the proper American policy is to save a few dollars in the building of ships and sacrifice our independence, our self-respect and our actual interests as a nation.

It is fortunate that Charles Coatesworth Pinckney, statesman and partiot, is no longer alive to learn from the Democrats of today how poorly he represented the American spirit when he replied to the demands of Napoleon's Minister that the motto of America was "Millions for defense, but not one cent for tribute."

To-day, at least among the Democrats of America, there are no millions for defense, but there is a pitiful disposition to pay tribute in consideration and concession to any demands that an insolent foreign nation may urge.

In Ambassador Pinckney's time the United States had about one-third the territory that it now possesses and about one-twentieth of the population.

It was smaller in men, but larger in manhood. It was smaller in size, but larger in independence and honor. It was lesser in wealth, but greater in courage.

For Ambassador Pinckney was not speaking for a nation of a hundred millions to a nation of less than half that number. He was speaking for a scant five million of plain American citizens, and asserting his independence and theirs in the face of the greatest military nation of that time, and of the greatest military leader of the world.

But courage and determination more than made up for lack of numbers and lack of wealth, and Talleyrand accepted Pinckney's defiance and abandoned France's insulting demands.

Even in our day courage and conscience count for more than size. Little Montenegro is one of the smallest nations in the world. Yet all the powers of Europe, with their fleets concentrated at its shore, could not make it abandon what it believed to be right. King Nicholas, of Montenegro, in spite of the threats of the powers, prosecuted the siege of Scutari until he took the city.

And withal little Montenegro is so small upon the map and the rest of Europe is so large. In view, then, of our own American experience and from our observation of the achievements of other nations reliant upon right, it would seem that the size of a country is not so important as the size of the men it has at its head.

"TEACH US TO PRAY"

By LILIAN LAUFERTY.

TEACH us to pray;
'Tis dark o'er all the world,
And over land and sea the mists close down.
Out in the darkness hopelessly we stray,
And search—and can not find again our way.
O God! teach us to pray.

Teach us to pray;
We are not worthy, Lord;
For we have dwelt long years in sin and shame.
We closed our eyes and would not see the way;
And now 'tis vain—for hopelessly we stray.
O God! teach us to pray.

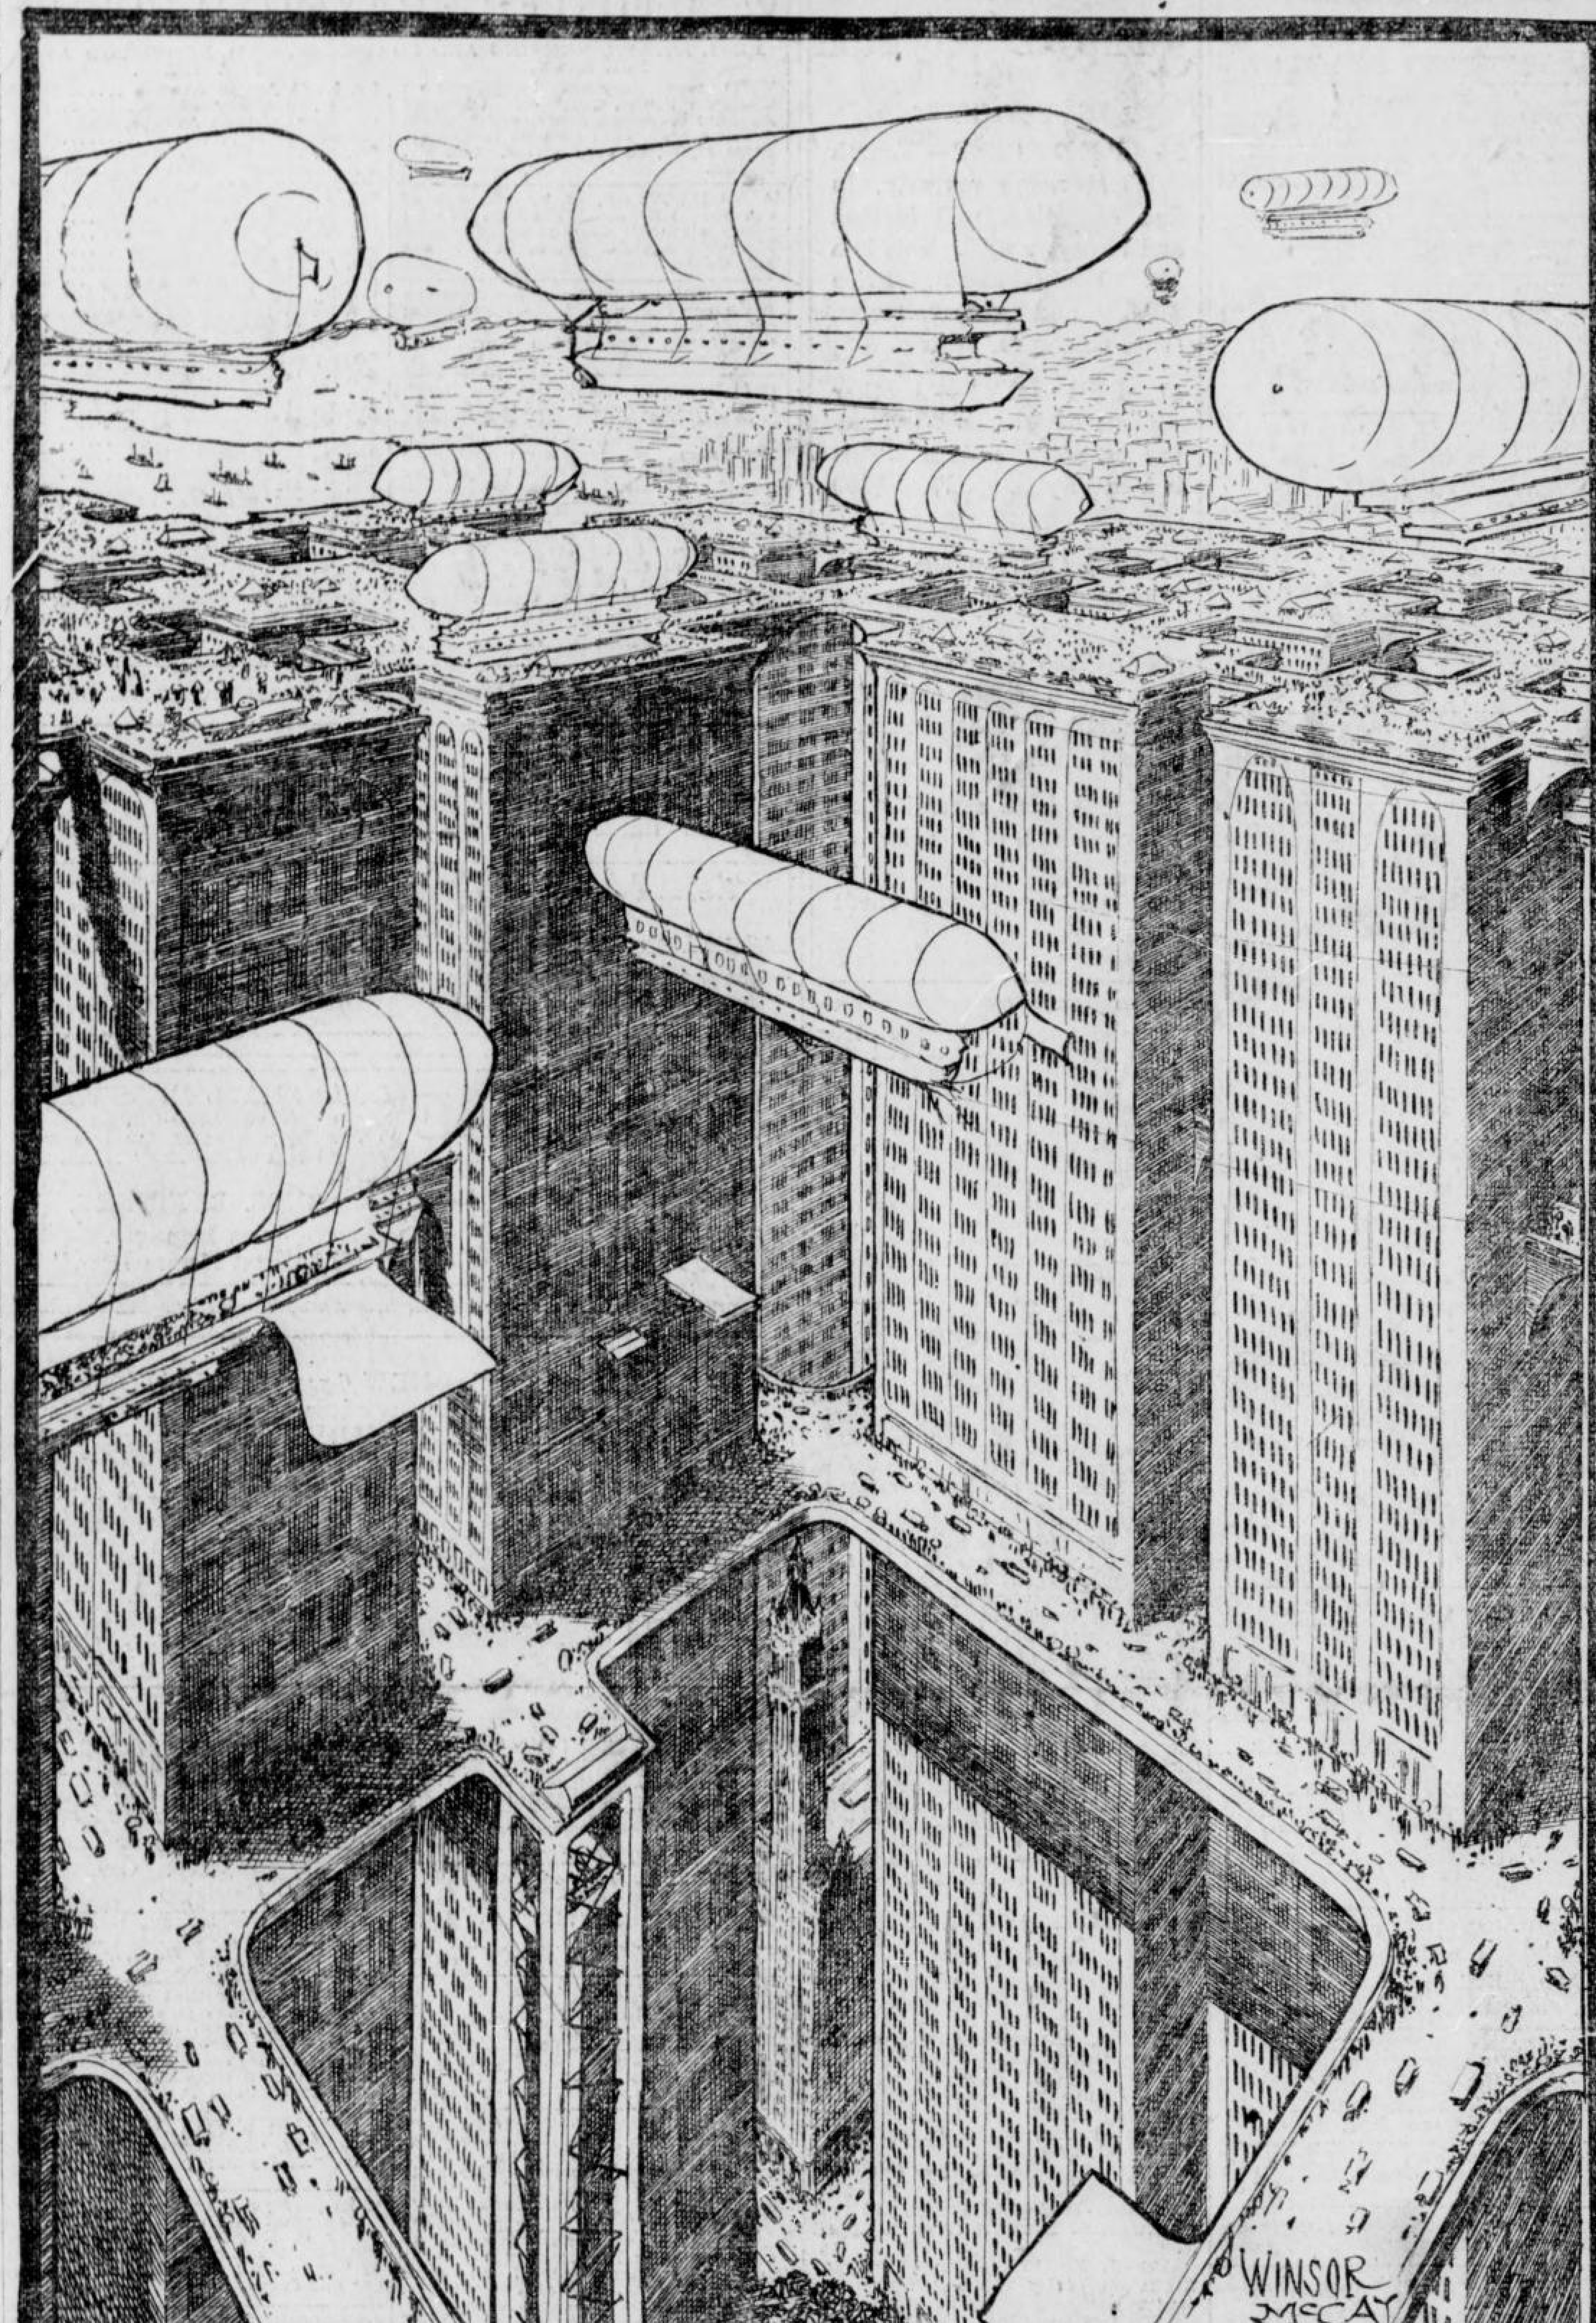

Teach us to pray,
For this cannot be prayer
Which comes but as the cry of hearts of fear.
We are poor trembling mortals gone astray—
If it be not too late to find Thy way.
O God! teach us to pray.

Teach us to pray,
For everywhere is gloom,
And sudden terror seizes on our hearts.
A bitter knowledge comes to us to-day:
We are world-weary sinners far astray.
O God! teach us to pray.

Teach us to pray,
We would but speak with Thee.
Our hearts are full of what but Thou couldst understand,
And we are tired children far astray.
We seek the light of Thine Eternal Way.
Dear God, teach us to pray.

Teach us to pray—
Yet this itself is prayer
From hearts of troubled pilgrims learning peace.
Grant us but strength to go along Thy Way.
We are Thy little children who did stray,
Lo! ere we sleep—we pray!

If You Should Live 100 Years

If you should be alive 100 years from to-day, no doubt you will be able to see sights in the United States like the above. Here you see the great, tall buildings of the future, so tall that the giant skyscrapers of to-day, one of which boasts of a height of 750 feet, would appear but a pigmy compared to the skyscraper of the future with its more than 100 stories. You may be sure that when buildings such a sare pictured above become a reality, the airship willthen be as common as the trolleys of to-day.

American Genius Has Given the World Its Greatest Wonder

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

IN antiquity it was said that there were seven wonders of the world, headed by the great Pyramids of Egypt.

In the Middle Ages the list of world's wonders was changed throughout, and then it started with the Coliseum of Rome.

To-day, if we should revise the list once more, there can be no doubt as to what would stand at the head—it would be the Panama Canal.

In order to be accepted as a "wonder," any work of man must make a particular kind of appeal to the imagination. That it excites admiration is not enough: it must also awaken the feeling that in creating it man has taken a step forward, beyond the line of his previous achievements.

What Nature Has Done.

Regarded in this way, the Panama Canal is without a rival, as the intense interest shown by the entire world in its approaching completion proves.

For the first time in his history man has directly joined two oceans, the greatest on the globe. For the first time he has cut two continents asunder. Thus he has made himself, in effect, A GEOLOGICAL AGENT. In their appeal to the imagination all his former works sink into relative insignificance.

If some new Herodotus were to go wandering through our modern world in search of marvels he would, on arriving at Panama, find no words strong enough to express his amazement. He would exclaim that the Americans had defied the gods by changing their arrangement of the face of the earth!

In order to understand what the Panama Canal means as an example of human interference with geography, we must look at what nature had done on the same spot. For this purpose take a map showing the Central American and West Indian region, with indications of the depth of water on both sides, and a raised chart, like Mr. Gray's, exhibiting a bird's-eye view of the line of the canal across the Isthmus.

Thus you will perceive that in some long past period, broad, though very irregular, necks of land probably connected the two Americas, joining many of the islands to the mainland, both north and south. The Gulf of Mexico was once nearly isolated, like a great lake, and there were other large lakes where the Caribbean Sea now rolls its waters.

Afterward there was a sinking, separating the islands from the continental shore, and leaving only the narrow Isthmus to connect North and South America.

Two Oceans United by Man.

For ages this condition has persisted, and it is doubtful if the two continents have ever been completely cut apart, at least since the cretaceous age. More likely the rocky spine of the isthmus has always connected them, whatever other changes may have occurred.

If this be so, it is evident that, in making the Panama Canal, we have interfered with an original arrangement of Nature. We have taken two oceans which she had separated and united them by a waterway. That waterway, to be sure, is a mere thread, and we have had to elevate much of it above sea level (which Nature could not have done), but it serves our purpose, and does it without upsetting any of Nature's broader designs. If the whole isthmus were swept away the Gulf Stream would probably be diverted, and a climatic catastrophe might fall upon northwestern Europe, if not upon North America itself.

It will be just 400 years next September since Balboa, standing silent upon his "peak in Darien," saw the glitter of the Pacific and thus knew that there was another great ocean west of America.

He, and others after him, looked for a natural waterway between those oceans, but the possibility of making such a way could not have occurred to him, and he certainly had no foresight of the mighty nation that was to arise in the north, composed of a different race from his, and destined, in so short a time, to link the ocean behind him with that which he saw far ahead.

No More to Discover.

The age of discovery of new habitable lands, capable of becoming the seats of new empires, is past. We now know the whole earth, as Nature made it, having seen even its poles, through the eyes of brave explorers. It only remains for us to complete its conquest by making it fitter for our habitation.

The Panama Canal is the first gigantic stride taken in this new conquest. American genius and enterprise have achieved it unaided. We have paid its cost in lives and treasure; let him beware who would deprive us of the fruit of our toil and sacrifice!

Rev. John E. White Writes on The Sociological Congress

It Means That the South Intends to Make an End of Outside Faultfinding by Undertaking Itself All of the Faultfinding That Is Necessary.

WRITTEN FOR THE GEORGIAN
By REV. DR. JOHN E. WHITE
Pastor Second Baptist Church

WHEN sociology first came South it met a cold reception. Here and there a college professor extended hospitality, but the popular mind viewed it askance. The word was the limit of new-fangled scientifics and smacked of a certain "black beast" called Socialism.

Who would have thought that in the year 1913 a great Southern Sociological Congress would be meeting in Atlanta?

This Sociological Congress which began its session here last Friday evening means criticism. You know that, of course, if you have attended any of the conferences.

South Criticising Itself.

It means that the South intends to make an end of outside fault finding by undertaking itself all the fault finding that is necessary. Southern conditions of one kind and another have been the subject of a good deal of discussion in this country and abroad. Injurious impressions about the South have gone out over the world.

The Southern Sociological Congress means that Southern men are addressing themselves to Southern conditions and that the best intelligence and the most unselfish patriotism is to be concentrated upon all the social problems of the Southern States. The old protest—"Let the South alone"—may now cease. The South is not going to let herself alone.

Wherever there is any general situation of social sorrow, of depressed civilization, of backward progress, our minds and hearts are to be organized and a great hand stretched forth with the truth on its palm for all the people to see.

It will be a Southern hand, a hand of understanding and sympathy.

The Broad Diagnosis.

It will be again of incalculable value for Southen men to see the truth about ourselves and see it whole. None of the conditions which need remedy can be dealt with effectively so long as they are considered merely individual and local.

The slogan of the congress is "A Solid South for a Better Nation." That is a solidity of Southern society which peculiarly invites the sociological lever. We are a morally inflammable people. The resolution of improvement can be invoked for a general contagion of progress.

A good straight look at the Southern field sociologically, for instance, will show our weakness clearly in relation to our strength. There are 30,000,000 people, but they are not all safely civilized. From the standpoint of the sociologist—and this is the standpoint of the truth—the South is ten million strong and not far from twenty million weak.

There are 10,000,000 people who represent the intelligence, the thrift and the progressiveness of the Southern States, but there are 10,000,000 white people—and Anglo-Saxon at that—who, on account of illiteracy and unsocialized natural intelligence, are suffering the penalties of backwardness.

They constitute the real problem, and until it is taken out of the eddies and put into a current the reliability of our civilization is called into question.

The 10,000,000 negroes also are here among us and a part of the heavy downpull which handicaps us.

Optimism With Motive.

The characteristic of the Sociological Congress is optimism with a motive. Those who stand outside and criticise the South do not do us any good, and, indeed, can not.

Grover Cleveland said: "Those who stand next to the burden are alone able to lift it." When a man finds fault with himself there is hope of practical repentance.

Southern men believe in the South. They believe that its resources justify a radiant vision. These resources of material wealth in soil and climate, in mind and field, are world assets.

Our resources of human nature are generous and courageous. We constitute the great American reserve of the unmixed republican stock of jealous Anglo-Saxonism. Our great powers only await enlistment, combination and direction.

There is nothing going on below the Mason and Dixon line that appeals quite as much to fundamental patriotism as the beginnings of constructive criticism realized and foreshadowed in the Southern Sociological Congress.

No Molecule Ever Rests

By EDGAR LUCIEN LARKIN.

MOLECULES are composed of atoms; and, of course, the least number that can form an atom is evidently two, and the number varies greatly from the molecules of rare gas to dense solids. But no molecule within the entire range of human experience is at rest. Put very fine particles in water, put a small drop of the water under the lenses of a very high power microscope and examine. The particles move rapidly and in many directions. Thus a particle will move on a short straight line and then turn abruptly, not in a curved or round corner, but sharp, angular turns will be made again and again, the path being zigzag.

When the phenomenon was discovered in 1827 by Brown the motions were named Brownian motions in his honor. But the microscopes used by him would be in the "ash heap" now, or in a museum of curios. The present day microscopes are instruments of very remarkable power.

Brownian Motions.

The Brownian motions have been studied by many able physicists. At first investigators thought that the mysterious motions were caused by slight inequalities in temperature in the little drop of water. This was disproved. The motions were apparently self-caused, and continuous, no rest. Thus the smaller the particles suspended in the liquid, the faster they moved. Finally they used particles to the limit of their magnifying power, and the rapidity of the strange movements ever increased with decrease of size.

All kinds of liquids were used to sustain the floating and flying things. No explanation of the motions was made; still men could scarcely believe that they moved of themselves. Then came the very wonderful new ultra-violet energy-ray microscope, and new methods of applying rays to the flying bodies. All was now animation in laboratories; the limit of all power of seeing was reached; and it seemed that the very interiors of the particles could be reached. New kinds of liquids were discovered and used, and new kinds of excessively minute particles suspended. They all moved; but new rates, new speeds were discovered.

Speeds Increased.

Then another new plan was tried; fine metals, as silver, were torn apart by electricity into dust of silver so fine as to be beyond imagination. These were put into liquids, and specific speeds were greatly increased.

Then an unheard-of experiment was made—the extremely small fragments of silver were floated in gas. They moved faster than ever and in far longer paths before turning. The great discovery was made; they do not move of themselves, but are carried along hither and thither by the original invisible molecules of the liquids and gases. These move perpetually.
